Dad Finds Son, 3, Dead In Cistern

Boy Found Drowned Two Hours After Search at Farm Home.

Falling through the cover on a new cistern at his parents' home six miles west of Mansfield last night, three-year-old James Carl Fishburn drowned in the icy water before his father found him.

The boy, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Carl S. Fishburn, Walker's Lake road, wandered away from the house about 5:30 p. m., Sheriff Frank E. Robinson said. The parents and neighbors started a search for the child after they missed him, but it was two hours later before the father discovered the body in the cistern near the house.

Acting Coroner Blake Kohler said the child was dead when the father found him. Deputy Sheriff John Whitcomb who assisted with the investigation said it was impossible to determine how long the boy had been in the cistern, but it had been long enough to permit thin ice to form on top of the cistern.

Fishburn probed in the water several times with a pole before he located the body. He pulled it to the surface with a garden rake. There was about five feet of water in the cistern.

Officers said there was no pump in the cistern and the top was safe except for one place where the child's mother had been drawing water for her Monday washing. A wood cover had been placed over the opening and the parents believed it was too heavy for the child to move.

Fishburn told officers he had dug the cistern only a few months ago and had not had a chance to put a pump in it. The dark color of the water and the ice on top made it difficult to see the body under the surface, Whitcomb said.

The body was removed to the Dowds funeral home in Mt. Vernon. Funeral services will be conducted Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. at the Brandon church near Mt. Vernon with Rev. A. J. Miller officiating. Burial will be in the Brandon cemetery.

Attack! Allied Troops Shown In African Raid

20 PER CENT PAY DEDUCTION TAX FAVORED

'Half-and-Half' Levy Would Forgive Income Tax From Mid-1942.

URGE NEW PLAN JULY 1

Legislators Propose Measure To Include Victory and Income Charges.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Tentative approval by a house subcommittee of a 20 per cent paycheck withholding on income and victory taxes after July 1 today brought support for a "half-and-half" application of the Ruml pay-as-you-go plan for canceling all of 1942's income tax.

The "half-and-half" proposal, it was pointed out, would forgive income payments for the last six months of 1942 and the first six months of 1943 merely through enactment of the withholding tax with amendments adjusting the difference in taxable income at the end of the year.

Members of house ways and means committee and its five-man subcommittee, which approved the withholding device, said the proposal has received considerable attention by both groups. They added that all proposals for canceling all or a part of one year's tax liabilities have been deferred for the present.

Permanent postponement of action to dispose of a year's liabilities would give automatic effect to the "half-and-half" plan since no law exists for double collections.

Advocates of the Ruml plan, although not committed to the move to cancel part of each year's taxes, conceded that their original proposal for by-passing all 1942 taxes would have to be revised.

There no longer is sufficient time to enact a pay-as-you-go collection plan by March 15, the deadline for filing 1942 returns. The taxpayers will be required to pay two quarterly installments

500 Planes Hit, Scourge City; Invasion Near

Half Hour Of Concentrated Flame And Explosion Officially Called Prelude To Land Attack; RAF Pilots Return Jubilant.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—In an officially announced "prelude to invasion," 500 British bombers visited fire and explosion upon Berlin in wholesale lots during the night and the air ministry today hailed the attack the heaviest yet made against the German capital.

Nineteen huge British planes were lost. But pilots and officials together were more than satisfied with results. Under-Secretary for Air Capt. Harold H. Balfour said the present air offensive against Germany "is preparing the way for an Allied invasion of Europe" and added:

"Berlin got it heavier last night than it has ever had it so far."

Pathfinder bombers, the first over Berlin, dropped flares which brilliantly lighted the targets.

The first wave of four-engined attackers then roared in with a mixed load of high explosive and incendiary bombs.

They dropped everything they had within the space of 15 minutes.

As they left the target areas, a second wave swept in and finished the job in probably the best example of timing seen in this war.

The first bomb blasted a hole into Adolf Hitler's capital at 10:04 p. m., and the last one exploded at 10:35.

British bombers left England for this 58th attack upon Berlin at intervals of one minute and returned with the same clock-like regularity. Crews poured out of the planes wildly enthusiastic, and as one man they said:

"Berlin has been well and truly pranged."

"Prang" is the favorite Royal Air Force expression for coordinated and effective bombing.

Veterans of all previous raids upon St. Nazaire, Cologne, Nuremberg, Milan, Turin and elsewhere declared they felt last night's attack surpassed any of them, even though greater numbers of planes have occasionally been used in the past.

The British radio told the people of Europe that Berlin felt the weight of more than twice as many RAF bombs last night than the German air force ever dropped in its heaviest raid on London at the height of the "blitz."

POISE FOR BLOW AT JAP CONVOY

Allied Planes Wait Chance To Strike at 14 Ships Headed For New Guinea.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Secretary of Navy Frank Knox told the senate foreign relations committee today that we will "utterly destroy" the Japanese fleet before the war is ended.

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA — A 14 ship Japanese convoy, one of the largest ever assembled by the enemy in this sector of the southwest Pacific, moved westward from New Britain toward the New Guinea coast today as bad weather delayed Allied airmen waiting to strike at the Armada.

A communique from General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said the convoy was last sighted about 175 miles west of the big enemy base at Rabaul.

While its destination was still uncertain, the convoy's position was roughly 250 air miles from the Japanese strongholds of Salamaua and Lae on the north east coast of New Guinea.

Allied airmen were poised for a blow at the Japanese force and awaited only clearing skies, but the communique indicated the enemy had chosen his weather shrewdly, reporting the ships were "moving under cover of an ad-

'BLANK CHECK'

Bill Would Give Director Full Liquor Ration Rule.

COLUMBUS —(INS)— The house committee today was to receive from a special subcommittee the draft of a liquor rationing bill which would empower the state liquor director to establish such rationing regulations as he sees fit.

The bill is a substitute for the Metzenbaum bill, which would have established a card-ration system through which all adults would have been entitled to a ration certificate on payment of a 25-cent fee. The new bill leaves all details to the discretion of the director.

The purchase of any liquor under the rationing regulations for resale by permit holders, however, is made punishable by revocation of the permittee's license, and any violations by an individual is subject to a fine of up to $50, imprisonment to 30 days, or both.

DRIVE WORKERS 'WARMING UP'

Red Cross Reports $932 on First Day, Bigger Amounts Due Later In Week.

Richland county's approximate 900 workers steamed into the second day of the Red Cross war fund campaign this morning after scattered Mansfield returns yesterday revealed an initial day's collection of $932.32 of the county's $59,000 quota.

Most of the $932.32 came in before solicitatons started, workers said, with heaviest amounts expected toward the middle or end of this week when various organization meetings are expected to vote substantial contributions. Meanwhile a house-to-house drive will continue until every home has been contacted.

Girl Scouts today completed work of blanketing the city with pamphlets concerning the campaign. They distributed 600 to each of the city's 10 school districts.

Boy Scouts, last week, placed blotters in every business place to which the public has access, put posters in every store, and supervised location of banners which float on city streets to call attention to the drive.

Red Cross headquarters were encouraged yesterday when the morning mail brought in two one hundred dollar checks from individuals who had read of the drive's inauguration. These amounts, along with $202, from women's clubs, and $10 from men's groups, were included in the total.

Klein yesterday established temporary headquarters at 136 Park avenue west for consultation with patrons who lost apparel in storage or left at the store for alteration or cleaning. Klein and insurance company representatives are conferring on loss and coverage.

Only a few coats and smaller fur pieces were saved. These were hurled away from the flames when an explosion of accumulated gases shattered display windows, driving the displayed apparel onto the street.

60-Day Dog Quarantine Goes On Sunday In Rabies Fight

All unvaccinated dogs of Mansfield and Richland county will be quarantined for 60 days, starting next Sunday, it was announced today by Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner.

Mansfield's board of health last night supported the attitude of the county board, expressed Saturday, approving the resolution asked by Dr. Wild as a means of checking a possible rabies epidemic with the return of warm weather.

"I do not wish to be severe on dog owners," Dr. Wild said today, "and the quarantine will be as lenient as possible although it provides a penalty of $100 fine for a first violation and the imposition of a 90-day jail sentence together with the fine for subsequent offenses."

Dogs which have been inoculated against rabies and bear the heart-shaped tag which accompanies the vaccination serum and which will be placed on the animal by the veterinary, will not be quarantined, the health commissioner said.

1,200 Of 1,500 O.S.R. Inmates Offer To Contribute Blood

The Red Cross Blood Donor Unit visited the Ohio State Reformatory today where more than four-fifths of the inmate population had volunteered to contribute to the war effort in one of the few ways open to them.

"The inmates have been awaiting this opportunity since Pearl Harbor," Superintendent Arthur L. Glattke said. "Volunteers reported as soon as we learned such donors were invited to 'give of themselves.'"

With names of more than 1,200 of the 1,500 inmates on the waiting list of the donor service, reformatory attaches were concerned today to learn the date of the unit's next visit, and whether or not such visitations would become a regularly scheduled event.

Only one unit is available to serve the entire Cleveland district and this unit has facilities for handling not more than 160 contributions each day, Red Cross officials said.

The donor line formed at the reformatory about 9:30 a. m. continuing through the lunch period to finish shortly after 1 p. m.

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON—The first rudimentary machinery of the United Nations apparently is about to come into existence.

We learn from the significant Toronto address of Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, that the United States intends at once to undertake discussions with other members of the United Nations.

Secretary Welles, like many others, feels that it is dangerous to delay in creating machinery through which the United Nations can work after the war. The start toward that as indicated in his Toronto address is to be a most tentative and modest one.

Clapper

The proposal in hand now is that the United Nations should set up machinery for the purpose of assembling and studying all international aspects of the problem of freedom from want. In this proposed study how to achieve freedom from want, questions of re-employment after the war, of trade relations, gold and currency problems, and international investment would be examined.

Evidently that is what President Roosevelt had in mind the other day when he told his press conference that a United Nations conference was under consideration to discuss plans for a post-war international food supply program, and to prevent famines or surpluses. Now it appears that the program actually is broader than that of food supply alone.

Secretary Welles has long been pressing for some kind of a start toward giving enduring structure to the United Nations.

At Toronto he voiced again the thought that he recovery policies and in assuming joint responsibility for preserving peace.

There had been hopes that something more substantial and more extensive might be developed soon, something in the nature of an executive body for the United Nations. Such an organization should have been in existence to take over the civilian side of the North African affair. But that has not materialized, and there is no sign of such a development soon.

The project for putting a United Nations group to work studying the problem of freedom from want is a step toward the end in mind. It isn't a very aggressive step. In fact it is just barely perceptible progress because it is no very great achievement to persuade nations to appoint representatives to meet together and discuss how they can provide employment after the war, how the world can be fed, how international investment might be developed. It is in fact a discussion of how the resources of the United States may be used in helping to restore the wounds of the world after the war.

That's a beginning. A beginning, however modest, is to be welcomed, for the way in long and hard, and it is time that the journey was begun.

So while I don't think any world-shaking step is being taken, it is a realistic move. As Secretary Welles says, if such study and discussions is not begun now, the various governments may allow divergent views to crystallize and make any agreement hopeless. And if there is no peace, then we have the prospect of only brief interlude before a worse war begins.

LANDIS WARNS OF COMPULSORY DEFENSE WORK

Declares Civilians Must Not 'Drop Guard' or He'll Go To Congress.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON - Civilian Defense Director James M Landis warned today that it may be necessary to make Civilian Defense work compulsory unless Americans stop "dropping their guard" after every Allied victory.

Landis said in an interview that the OCD's volunteer organization suffered its worst slumps after the battle of Midway and the invasion of French North Africa.

"It may come to a point where I would be forced to ask congress to consider legislation making it mandatory for civilians to devote a certain number of hours a week as air raid wardens, auxiliary policemen, fire watchers, etc.," he said.

He emphasized that he did not see compulsion as an immediate possibility. He explained that such legislation would be necessary only if the number of active volunteers dropped to 25 per cent of the present total enrollment of more than 5,000,000.

Landis estimated that there were at least 3,000,000 active and trained volunteers. While that figure stays well above 1,000,000 there will be no necessity of going to congress, he said.

"The public has co-operated extremely well in view of the fact that the enemy is so far away," he said. "But it is not the current probability of air attack that should govern our state of preparedness. It is good business to eliminate or minimize every possibility of an attack. Drop your guard and invite the enemy to strike?"

Landis criticized local communities for not purchasing stirrup pumps which were offered to them for use in private households. When defense councils did not buy their quotas last week, he said, OCD had to put the pumps on the general market at higher prices.

"But what can we do," he said. "We had 2,250,000 pumps made and offered them to defense councils at the wholesale price of $1.86. The retail price will be about a dollar higher."

WHITE HOUSE SILENT ABOUT LABOR DRAFT

Senate Military Affairs Unit Prepares to Open Hearings on Measure.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON -- The White House today was reported to be maintaining a temporary "hands off" policy on the Austin-Wadsworth labor draft bill as the senate military affairs committee prepared to open hearings on the measure.

"I do not know the attitude of the administration," said Democratic Senate Leader Barkley. "My own attitude is one of 'watchful waiting.'"

Before beginning hearings on the labor draft measure the committee was scheduled to vote on the Bankhead bill calling for deferment of all farm labor from the draft. The committee was reported to be closely divided on the Bankhead proposal which, along with a companion bill to furlough farmers now in the armed forces, was assailed by the war department.

Congress appeared headed for a bitter battle over the Austin-Wadsworth legislation which was endorsed by Secretary of War Stimson but opposed by War Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt who said that he would exhaust voluntary methods for mobilizing manpower before turning to compulsion.

First witnesses called to testify on the national service bill were Rep. James Wadsworth (R.), N. Y., co-author, former Sen. Edward R. Burke of Nebraska and Granville Clark, New York lawyer. These three pioneered the successful battle for the first draft act.

Under terms of the labor draft measure, the president would have authority to require men from 18 to 65 and women from 18 to 50 to go into specified war jobs.

"Whether the bill is enacted or not depends, in my opinion, on whether we can carry on voluntarily with 11,000,000 persons in the armed forces," said Sen. Reynolds (D.), N. C., chairman of the military affairs committee.

Sen McKellar (D.), Tenn., denounced the bill as "involuntary servitude," while Sen Wheeler (D.), Mont., declared that it would lead to the sort of dictatorship America is fighting against.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who signed reports to the committee assailing the Bankhead bills, indicated that he favors the Austin - Wadsworth measure.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK--Most generally around any ball club I ever worked for why we always figured the best way to do about our wife was not to leave them mess around together because otherwise they may get into fights although, of course, in the spring they would like to go south with you because, after all, they are only human and they like to get away from the snow and you can't blame them but, during the season it is different. Like, for instance, one wife may be all right but maybe she is jealous because another guy gets a bigger salary or one is prettier than another or they get to playing bridge or boasting how educated they are so, all in all, the way it generally worked out, you practically didn't know whether anybody had a wife or not and it worked out fine.

Pegler

But the year Charles Dissenat took over to manage our club and Mrs. Dissenat moved into the dugout to stimulate morale, well it wasn't any time before one day she said everybody was got to come to their house and bring their wife for a wienie roast because she wants to know all the girls better so we can be one great big happy family.

Well, my war department, she is very-footed and never no false moves out of her so I wasn't worried for myself because I knew she could field her position in any league but we had some others that you just couldn't see them doing their stuff with an old soggy hot dog on a paper plate and potato salad and baked beans and all like that and nothing to drink but ice tea or fruit punch without nothing in it and I knew as plain as day we were going to have trouble.

I had met Ollie Grummle's old lady down south several times and I knew she was a very nice girl but she had a mind of her own, like they say, and moreover she was a hoister and when she went out on a party she didn't want any food except to throw it at people in a playful manner and she certainly wasn't going to get off the ground on tea, hot or cold or any fruit juice or pop. So, sure enough, Millie Grummle, she gets wind of it that Mrs. Dissenat's parties are very dusty so she drops into a couple of saloons that she trades at on the way to the Dissenat's for this jolly family get together and puts in several layers of bourbon and put a pint slab in her pocketbook and shows up at the rejoicing practically leaping.

Well, first, Mrs Dissenat, she made a little speech how charming the ladies are and we ought to see more of each other and Millie, who is setting there in the front row or chairs, she ups with a deviled egg and I am telling you Pennock, himself, never had better control, and she pops the boss' old lady right in the eye.

"Honey, you damn fool," Ollie yelled at his old lady, but she pushed him in the face with her plate and there he is with baked beans and coleslaw all over his mug.

But Mrs. Dissenat she wiped off the deviled egg and pretended not to notice nothing and Millie quieted down awhile and Mrs Dissenat went on and on about how we should all be friends and consider each other's feelings so Millie she breaks out again and yells, "Then why don't you dry up?"

"Mama," Ollie yelled "please keep your big trap shut, won't you please, darling?"

"Well," Millie yelled all the louder, "it's a free country and it is free speech isn't it? Who ever asked for all this bazoo? I thought it was a party but here it is like a camp-meeting."

They quieted Millie down again everybody pretending not to notice nothing, and finally, after awhile, we get into a game of ring-around-the-Rosie and Millie had been gnawing that slab so she outs with her foot and trips the boss' wife plop on her face and poor old Ollie Grummle he liked to died.

So finally Millie she said as long as we were having speeches she would make a speech, herself, so she gets up and starts to say, "Well of all the lousy parties I ever was at and, personally I think if the manager of the club has got anything to say to the players he ought to say it himself but if all the wives go popping off you get too many conflicting ideas and I got as much right as the next one to shoot off my face but I believe in minding my own business and I think it would be a swell idea is a certain party would keep the gab shut——"

That was on July 26 and on July 31 Ollie and Millie Grummle landed in Peoria.

AIRCRAFT CASE RULING NEARS

WLB Calls Special Meeting To Decide Controversy That Threatens Strike.

BULLETIN

SAN DIEGO, Calif. —(AP)— Impatient at the lack of a decision from the war labor board on the long-standing aircraft wage dispute, an AFL aircraft union called a second 24-hour demonstration meeting in the industry today, this time at the big Consolidated plant here.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The war labor board called a special meeting for today in an attempt to hand down a decision in the west coast aircraft case which threatens to break out into a strike" if the workers do not get a pay boost.

The meeting was scheduled for 10 a. m., (EWT) after the board met for more than three hours last night in the hope of reaching a solution to the controversial problem. The board started its night deliberations at 7:30 p. m. but at 10:40 members decided to quit because a solution was not in sight.

It was reported, however, that most board members had made up their minds to refuse demands of the west coast workers for a general pay increase. Instead, they were said to have approved a decision under which beginners in the plane factories would be allowed a wage boost of from three to five cents an hour. Men in other job classifications would be allowed some pay adjustments.

The board appeared insistent though that no general pay increase be allowed. It was said to have taken that stand after James F Byrnes, director of economic stabilization, ruled that because of the danger of inflation no workers could be given an industry-wide pay boost.

Involved in the dispute are nine west coast airplane companies, the AFL'S machinists, the CIO's auto workers and an independent welders union.

This story concerns a man (name unknown) who had a thermos bottle, but not any more. When he visited the ration board yesterday, either for tire or for gasoline rations, he left the coffee container at the window where he made application. Ration workers eagerly examined the bottle but only the aroma lingered. He had drained the contents . . . coffee before he misplaced the bottle, which may be reclaimed by calling at the fire-gasoline department of the office.

Woody Werick, 127 Cleveland avenue, driver for the Safety Taxicab company, 80-86 North Walnut street, is today's candidate for being the party old man Diogenes was looking for with his lantern. Mr. and Mrs. Edsel Lile, 334 North Townview circle, were passengers in Werick's cab from their home to a railroad station, a hotel and thence home. Finally Mrs. Lile missed her purse containing $175 and valuable papers. Meantime Werick, forced to his home by illness, discovered the purse and, despite his low feeling, started a series of telephone calls to locate the owner. Eventually he contacted Detectives Lee Remy and Oscar Krupp who brought the losers and the finder together.

ROONEY'S 1-A; MGM APPEALS

Employers Say Young Star's Essential Worker in Essential Industry.

(By United Press)

HOLLYWOOD - Mickey Rooney's employers appealed his 1-A classification today and demanded that he be left in Hollywood as an essential worker in an essential industry.

This action by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer first of its kind since the army began taking movie stars in wholesale lots brought into the open the actor soldier question - one of the strangest of all the war-time problems besetting the federal government.

It was taken as another movie personality -- Orson Wells -- was ticketed for a place in the army, though only for limited service. Examined at his request out of turn, he was found to be asthmatic, to have flat feet, a weak back, and arthritis. He had been classified 4-F but recently was reclassified 1-A. He probably will enter the army in a few weeks for non-combatant work.

"It's like this," explained one of Hollywood's top picture makers, "the movies have been classified as an essential industry. And their workers are essential too, except actors. The government will defer our electricians and our carpenters."

As for actors in the army, the informant said they were not doing well. He said they tried to be good soldiers, but that they never get the chance to function like their tent mates.

"Let's consider Clark Gable as typical," he said. "Certainly he's doing everything he possibly can to make good in the air corps. But he's a movie star. Wherever he goes he attracts crowds. He can't help it but he causes confusion and work suffers when he appears."

GETS CONTRACT

Butler Superintendent Hired For Three-Year Term.

Supt. R C Rehard, completing his first year as head of the Butler schools, today had received a three-year renewal contract, providing an increase in salary.

Supt. Rehard came to Butler last year from Union county to succeed Willard S. Weekly. The Butler board of education voted unanimously last night to re-employ him at $100 more per year.

The Lucas and Union Rural boards of education are due to act on their superintendents' contracts soon, County Supt. Boyd Robinson said. Other superintendents in county schools will continue next year under present contracts.

WHISKY SEIZED

COLUMBUS (INS) - More than 100 quarts of untaxed whisky was seized over the week-end from cars returning from Indiana on U. S. Route 40, northwest of Eaton, O., by liquor inspectors and Preble county officials, J. W. Cleary, state enforcement chief announced today.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking for Myself.

SUPPOSE every writer now and then puts into print something for which he is later sorry or even ashamed, and when that happens the only consolation is that nothing is older than yesterday's editions and lots of people remember what they've read but not where they read it.

I am thinking now of a clipping I have on my desk of a column by Bob Fredricks in the Miami Herald of Jan. 6, in which he writes, "American fighting men are not greatly impressed or cheered by the appearance in London of Kay Francis, Carole Landis and other so-called Hollywood stars sent to England to entertain our boys," and goes on to say that performing in the war zones "amounts to a sweet publicity break" for any actor or actress.

Kilgallen

That clipping has been on my desk for quite a while, because I have been meaning to comment on it. At the moment it seems to me that the crash of the Pan-American clipper off Lisbon, which some show people were killed and others badly injured, is almost comment enough. Death is very hard to top.

But because I love show business and show people would like to add a little more testimony on the subject, Mr. Fredericks wrote: "If you are in show business you'll know what a sweet publicity break it is for a performer to be sent to London, or to the important camps at home. In time of war or peace the personal appearance tour is counted an important part of the build-up of any star. In peacetime, however, few if any of them ever could draw the crowds that are made to order for them in our big army and navy camps.

"So it amounts less to a contribution than a maneuver for a movie or other actor to get these choice assignments. True, most of them donate their time, and some even pay their own expenses. Nevertheless, they gain much more than they lose.

That's the way it was with Tamara. Tamara was a gentle little singer who had made a big hit in a couple of shows and then, as often happens on Broadway, dropped out of the limelight and made her living singing where she could and when she could. The bitter truth was that as of last week she was not a famous singer; she was a singer who had been famous once. All the headlines she ever expected to get were already pasted in her scrapbook from the days of "Roberta" and "Leave It to Me", and Mr. Fredericks can take my word for it that when she signed up with USO Camp Shows Inc. to entertain soldiers in whatever part of the world she was sent, nobody promised her, nor did she think, that she would be rewarded for the hard work she was prepared to do by even so much as one line of type.

She could have crossed the ocean half a dozen times, sung a thousand songs, entertained a million soldiers, and received less publicity than if she had stayed in New York and sold Mayor LaGuardia the first ticket to a charity affair at the Waldorf.

She got her "sweet publicity" quite unexpectedly, by dying for it.

MARY WASHINGTON CHAPTER HAS MEET

"Women for War Work" Is Discussed By Y. W. C. A. Executive Secretary and Supervisor of N. Y. A. Training Center.

A PROGRAM explaining the local training of women for war work and the regular business meeting held the attention of the members of the Mary Washington chapter of the D. A. R., when they met at the Women's Club, Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

A salad luncheon was served buffet style from a table centered with a green and white floral arrangement. Mrs. George Buchan presided at the table. Hostesses were Mrs. John Graham, chairman; Mrs. Glenn Hoover, Mrs. Jay Palmer and Mrs. H. H. Phelps.

The meeting was opened by the regent, Mrs. D. N. Roller, who called on Mrs. H. H. Sanford, the chaplain, for the devotionss. Mrs. P. B. Dietrichson led the pledge to the flag, after which the group, accompanied by Mrs. George Searle, sang "America."

Mrs. David Feiser, the social chairman, introduced the speakers, and explained that there is now a school in this area for the training of women for war work. This school is located near Mifflin and the Charles Mill dam, just six and one-half miles east of Mansfield, and is called the N. Y. A. Industrial Training Center.

Miss Gregory, executive secretary of the Y. W. C. A., spoke on the training of women for defense. She described the courses given at the Senior high school for all women, teaching sheet metal work, welding, and machine work. She also told about the size of the N. Y. A. training center and its activities in brief. These were enlarged upon by the second speaker, Miss Hess, who is the supervisor at the N. Y. A. training center.

Miss Hess outlined its training and recreation. At the present time there are one hundred and seven girls between the ages of seventeen and twenty-two, being trained at this camp. She urged members and their friends to visit this center to see for themselves the work that is being done.

Following the program, Mrs. Roller conducted the business session. The treasurer, Mrs. Weston Cutter, made her annual report, and Mrs. Roller distributed copies of the report of the work of all committees for the year. Mrs. F. A. Weaver reported that since pins are no longer available for the competitive speakers, they will be presented with certificates at the D. A. R. state convention.

A contribution was voted to the war drive of the American Red Cross. The next meeting of the chapter will be held April 12.

Look To Spring

War has not yet stopped the usual seasonal flow of new styles in women's clothes. This orange felt "Kiki" creation for spring wear was modeled by Andrel Lorain at a showing in New York's Hotel Ritz Carlton. It has a double profile brim and is trimmed with sapphire blue ribbon and a three-colored ostrich feather.

Gracie Allen's Home Alman(i)ac

An Army Colonel with the cutest little mustache who looks a little like Herbert Marshall was giving me a lecture the other night. He said thoughtless housewives throw away many things that might be useful to the war effort.

It's true too. I know women who have thrown away two or three husbands because they didn't match a new hair-do. Any one of those husbands might have made a dandy machine gunner or bombardier.

How many of us have thrown away the leaves after eating an artichoke. Those selfsame leaves can be woven into a nice throw or bedspread. Of course, it has to be kept under water to remain green and fresh, so it's a little impractical unless you keep goldfish.

Or oyster shells. After you have eaten the oysters, the shells can be cleaned and polished so they are very decorative. If scattered liberally on the stairs at night, they can tell you exactly what time your husband gets home. Of course, this is ethical only during months that have "R" in them.

Giving things away can be tricky too. Several years ago, George gave an old suit to a Japanese gardner. Last week it turned up in a newsreel on Admiral Tojo. We recognized it by an old gravy stain on the front. George hopes the suit catches him under the arms the way it did George.

The Colonel told us if only I had saved all of George's old razor blades, we could have made a new General Grant tank. I don't see how George could have shaved with a tank, but on the other hand it couldn't do any damage to his face either.

Capt. Harrington Speaks At Meet Of Round Table

Captain J. R. Harrington, instructor at the Mansfield airport, was guest speaker Monday afternoon at the Round Table club meeting held at the Women's Club.

Capt. Harrington told something of the history of aviation, and the work being done at the air field now with the Navy Air Cadets. He stated that in the post-war era the aviators will be used for the transportation of freight and passengers. He brought his talk to a close with an open discussion in which club members participated.

When luncheon was served at 12:30, arrangements of daffodils centered one long table and two small tables.

Books were brought for the Victory Book campaign. The next meeting will be held at the Women's Club March 16, at 1:30 p. m. Mrs. J. H. Todd will be the hostess.

Hobby Club Has Quarterly Dinner

The Buckeye Hobby club held its quarterly covered-dish dinner Monday night for families and friends of members. Mrs. L. H. Funk and Mrs. Pearl Faught were hostesses.

After the dinner, an interesting program was presented. Harry J. Meier presented two vocal numbers accompanied by his daughter. "A Victory Garden" was explained by a member of the Garden Center. She gave a systematic program for making victory gardens.

Mrs. William Kuhn gave a paper on "The Rogers Groups" in which she told of incidents about the life of John Rogers, the sculptor.

Mrs. Eva Rusk illustrated her hobby to the club by showing members various shells of different sizes and colors, which she designed into pins and pictures.

Contests were won by Mrs. Marion Gerrell and Mrs. Funk. The next meeting at the Y. M. C. A. will be held April 5 at 8:15 p. m.

How to Make a Splendid Cough Syrup at Home

A Big Saving, and It's So Easy! No Cooking!

Cough medicines usually contain a large quantity of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Take 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking! No trouble at all. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of truly wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It makes a real saving for you, because it gives you about four times as much for your money. It lasts a long time, never spoils, and children love it.

This is actually a surprisingly effective, quick-acting cough medicine. Promptly, you feel it taking hold. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes and makes breathing easy. You've never seen anything better for prompt and pleasing results.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

"The Authority on Authorities"

BIDDING LENGTH PAYS

YOU WILL profit from spirited bidding of great suit lengths, with hardly any high cards, opposite a partner who opened the auction, only if he understands an important fundamental as well as you. It is that many a hand will do better with the weak holding naming the declaration than with the strong one doing it. The long suit affords entry to the weaker hand if it is the trump, and you can get into the opposite one with its high cards. If, however, the stronger hand names the trump, you may have to keep leading away from it most of the time.

Why in the world should North, from the looks of his hand, count South on that bidding as having enough to prevent all but one losing trick? Only if he failed to consider the kind of holding which would have caused himself to make the self-same bids South did.

North should have taken several factors into account. First, he himself had made it clear to South that he held a six-four division between his own suits, by bidding spades twice before he showed the diamonds. In spite of South's having been told that, he had not raised either of North's suits, nor had he shown the kind of protection needed for a No Trump game by calling that declaration. Nor had South made anything but a minimum call each time. In fact, in bidding 3-Hearts over the 3-Diamonds, he had been economizing by not rebidding the clubs instead, which would have required 4-Clubs.

Going to a mere 4-Hearts over South's last bid would have been perfectly sound with North's good hand, but the jump to slam was just not excusable It, of course, was set, in fact a couple of tricks

Today's Menu.

Roast Pork Apple Sauce
Roasted Potatoes Broccoli

Chocolate Cream Pie Coffee

Chocolate Cream Pie.

1 baked 9-inch shell
3 ounces bitter chocolate
2½ cups milk
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 egg whites
¼ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons sugar

Shave chocolate or cut into small pieces and put into top of double boiler, add milk and heat together over hot water until chocolate is melted then beat with a rotary beater or wire whisk until chocolate is well blended with milk. While milk and chocolate heat together, measure sugar, flour, cornstarch and salt into small mixing bowl and mix well together Pour about 1 cupful of hot chocolate onto dry ingredients slowly, stirring in carefully to make a smooth paste. When well mixed and sufficiently thin to pour, pour into double boiler with remaining chocolate and milk. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until mixture is thickened and smooth. Continue cooking 10 to 15 minutes, stirring only occasionally, until starch is well cooked. Beat egg yolks, add a tablespoon or two of chocolate mixture, stirring in well. Put into double boiler, stirring mixture vigorously, and cook 2 minutes longer. Remove from stove, add butter and vanilla and cool; then turn into baked shell. Cover with meringue, made by beating whites with salt and sugar, and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until nicely browned.

"Mrs Graham," he said, "I am desolated to have to break in on you in this fashion, and haven't time to make the proper explanation"

"Mr. Milner, for reasons which I will explain later," my father said, "wishes to go through your bedroom and the suite beyond, to reach the hall on the other side. You are willing, are you not?"

"Of course," I told him, "this way, Mr Milner," and led the way to the door, determined not to take my eyes from him until he had left. I saw him look sharply around, and as he passed the closet, with a clever pretense of stumbling, he caught at the door knob and gave it a surreptitious turn.

Thankful for my foresight, I watched him pull at the camouflaged door leading to the next suite, which was also locked.

"Just turn the key," I suggested, and he obeyed, with a cryptic smile

"You do not believe in welcoming intruders, I see," he said.

"No we distinctly dislike them," I told him.

When he had gone through the door I heard him talking to Adams, my father's staunch aid, whom Milner believes to be his own man.

I turned the key on Milner quickly, then unlocked the closet and released Georges, beckoning him back to the living room with me and locking the door behind us.

"I don't trust that man," I said, "but I salute his ingenuity. He is perfectly capable of getting down to that outside balcony and crawling in at the bedroom window"

"I agree with you," my father said "I gather that you saw him try that closet door"

"Indeed I did" I told him.

"I shall have to take steps about that gentleman very shortly," he said meditatively, then spoke briskly.

"Georges, you will have to hurry through your after-dinner smoke, for when the waiters come for the dinner dishes, we shall have to lock you in the closet again. By the way, daughter, that was a clever trick, quickly executed. And now please telephone Room Service to send for the tables and dishes?"

Flushing with pleasure at his compliment I did his bidding.

The men sat smoking until a waiter knocked, then my father held out an ashtray for Georges' cigaret and I hurried the fugitive into the bedroom closet again, locked the door after him and hurried back into the living room.

My father, immediately opened the door and the waiters came in Following close at their heels was Adams, the guard whom my father had left in the adjoining suite, into which I had just ushered Milner, manager of the Lansfield.

"There's a lot of talk these days about what the war is going to do to retailers. It's going to be tough, I know . . . but I've got my own kind of war risk insurance, and I'm sure it will see me through."

1. "Now, even more than in normal times, people want the best they can get for their money. So I make it a point to feature the well-known advertised brands . . . especially the ones advertised right here in our local newspapers."

2. "When a product's scarce, I try to make sure my customers know exactly why. Of course, that's a lot easier when the manufacturer tells the story in newspaper ads. I often tear out such ads myself and display them here in the store."

3. "When items disappear, I don't just sit around biting my nails, wondering what to do. I get busy, stock new items . . . and whenever I learn that a new product is advertised in newspapers in my town, I make it a 'must' to get it."

4. "Believe me, it's already paying out, too. With enough satisfied customers, a merchant can weather a lot of storms. And the best way I know to keep 'em satisfied is to give 'em the products they all read about in the ads in our local papers."

War is teaching retailers everywhere a lot about advertising that they've never realized before. More and more, smart retailers are reaping benefits from the newspaper advertising support they get from manufacturers . . . benefits that are multiplied when retailers, in turn, back up newspaper-advertised products.

by REX HESS

Hello Rex:

Thought I had better drop you a line and let you know that I still exist. Although it is not very far from Toledo to Mansfield, with gas rationing and working six and seven days a week, don't get much time to roam around.

I think a lot about the golfers and wonder how some of them are taking this winter.

One man I wonder about in particular, Harry Schlegel, and how he keeps in trim, for I think this is one spring that he won't have the edge on the boys with his winter practice.

Although it will be impossible for me to be at the club, my wife will be back by the first of April and get things in shape so that the boys that are left can golf a little.

With these wimmen doing everything from building tanks and bombers and keeping house they should be able to handle a golf club very efficient.

I don't suppose I will get much golf till we hole Hitler and his gang out, but hope the golfers at home will get a few hours spare time to play for I think it takes a little relaxation now and then to keep them in there pitching.

* * *

I have had several fellows at the office here trying to fix up golf matches with me as soon as the weather is fit. You know there are a lot of tough golfers in Toledo and I think the safest thing for me is to leave my clubs at Mansfield, for I think I can hold my prestige as a golfer a lot better that way than trying to win in a match.

Well Rex will try and see you when I get down in the spring, so will slice off.

Irish McGee.

Possum Run golfers will be glad to hear of the definite decision to operate their playground again next summer, and of the Irish faith in the efficiency of women in wartime.

In the long winter silence maintained by McGee, there had been much speculation by his club swingers over the Possum plans for next season, and in places that speculation amounted to downright worry.

And of course there were the usual few who had the absolute low-down to the effect that the course wouldn't operate at all. Perhaps the McGeehan epistle will silence them.

With a wave of the pen in hand, Irish banishes all doubt. Now if he can banish the transportation problem as easily. . .

Prospect Cops Eighth Win

Newman Scores 34-5 Victory Over Bowman.

Prospect school rulers chalked up their eighth straight victory atop the Southern league yesterday by the low score of 16-12 over Woodland.

Newman, leading the Northern league with seven victories and one defeat, swamped Bowman 34-5, blanking the losers in the first and third periods.

Brinkerhoff rolled over Carpenter 23-7, and West Fifth barely edged Bushnell 11-9.

Beal of Newman turned in the day's high scoring mark with 16 points on eight baskets.

B-Schools Trim 679 From List

County Tournaments Reduce Big Cage Field.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS —(AP)— The casualties were terrific last week as Ohio's Class B high school basketball teams named county champions, 679 quintets falling from the state championship race in the "lose and get out" competition.

Still in there battling for the Class B crown surrendered by Somerset, which failed to survive the semi-finals of the Perry county classic, were 232 squads, including county champions, runners-up and exempted schools. They go into sectional play this week.

The Class A quintets, 232 of 'em, get into the tournament trials this week, too, all in quest of the laurels captured a year ago by Xenia Central — which looms as a strong contender again this season.

A 29-county trial blackout for northern, eastern and southeastern counties will disrupt the schedule of sectional tournaments Thursday night at Tiltonsville, Wellsville, Marietta, Euclid Shore, Youngstown, Chagrin Falls, Lorain, Kent, McDonald, Defiance, Findlay, Bascom, Fremont, Athens and Portsmouth.

The "lights-out" test is scheduled for around 9 p. m., just when the teams will be seeing their heaviest action. H. R. Townsend, state high school athletic commissioner, said each tournament manager would solve the problem in his own way.

"Some of them may move Thursday's schedule up earlier in the week," Townsend said, "while others may postpone the night's play. Others may go ahead with present plans, taking time out when the blackout is scheduled. Each tournament site, however, will be blacked out in the 29-county area during the test."

Sectional meets at Westerville, Dennison Dover, Zanesville, Ashland Leipsic, Celina, Cincinnati, Dayton and Springfield will not be hampered by the dimout.

Pain City, Madison county champion with 24 straight victories, goes into the sectionals with the best Class B record, while only five of the Class A contingent have not been beaten.

North Canton, winner of the Class B state title a couple of years ago heads the "A" group with 19 conquests, with Martins Ferry a game behind that total. Defiance has 17 in a row, Bexley 14 and Greenfield McClain 13. Cleveland South winner of 11 in a row, was toppled last week by West Tech.

Three Class B unbeaten teams saw their unblemished records ruined in county championship battles Tuesday night, the winner of 16, but the Summit county crown to Copley, New Albany, boasting 14 wins, dropped the Franklin county laurels to Grove City and Cygnet with 16 straight, was toppled by Webster Township which racked up its 17th in a row to win the Wood county laurels.

Other county champions in the undefeated class included: Van Wert, Middlepoint 19, Wayne Creston 18, Logan West Liberty, 17, Trumbull Champion 17, Lorain, Eaton 16, Fayette, Rhoadsville 16, Muskingum Dresden 16, Pickaway Pickaway Township 16 and Licking Utica 17. The except Letart Clearview team had its second straight unbeaten season with 16 victories.

Other county champions include Allen Gomer; Auglaize New Bremen Belmont Lafferty, Butler Fairfield Carroll, Augusta Champaign Woodstock, Clark, Erie Clinton, Blanchester Columbiana Salineville, Darke Arcanum, Defiance, Farmer, Fairfield Bremen, Gurnsey Seneca ville, Hamilton Pharisville, Hardin, Darkes, Highland Fairfield, Holmes Walnut Creek, Jefferson, Delphos, Knox Fredericktown, Lawrence South Point, Marion LaRue, Medina, Lodi, Meigs Chester, Mercer St Henry, Miami Lena-Conover, Montgomery Northridge, Noble Summerfield, Pike Stockdale, Portage Randolph Pebble, Lewisburg, Putnam, Ottawa Public, Richland, Union, Ross, Buckskin, Scioto, Green, Stark Hartville, Tuscarawas, Graehuttten Union, Broadway, Warren Waynesville, and Wyandot, Salem.

With the tournaments now on—leading to the state championship finals here March 27—the season's records mean nothing, all teams starting from scratch. From now on each club will hang up its uniforms as it meets defeat.

With the completion of sectional play this week, the teams swing into district play next week, and only 16 teams in each class will emerge from these tournaments. The survivors, for regional tournaments, will spit into sets of four from Class A eliminations at Zanesville, Kent, Bowling Green and Dayton, and Class B qualifiers at Athens, Kent, Bowling Green and Springfield. The regionals are booked for March 20.

One survivor from each regional will come to Columbus for the state March 27 championship round, with the semi-finals in the afternoon and the finals at night in downtown Columbus auditorium.

UNION DRAWS BYE

Union high school Indians, Richland county tournament champions, drew the only bye in the Bascom district tournament last night, and may meet Bellville in their first game.

Bellville plays Salem Saturday night at 9:30, and the winner battles Union March 11th in the second round at 10:15 p. m. Union barely edged Bellville 29-28 in an overtime final game in the Richland joust.

Bellville enters the district tourney without Homer Walker who suffered a broken ankle in the county tournament.

First round drawings at Bascom are: Friday night, Carey vs. Attica; Dunkirk vs. Chatfield; Van Buren vs. Alger; Bettsville vs. Wharton; Saturday night, St. Wendelin vs. Mt. Carey; Tiro vs. Calvert; Salem vs. Bellville.

FINDLAY DISTRICT JOUST OPENS TONIGHT

BUCYRUS—A changed schedule, caused by the Ohio blackout Thursday, will take Bucyrus high school cagers to Findlay tonight to compete in the sectional Class A basketball tournament instead of Thursday.

Bucyrus Redmen will meet Crestline at 7:30 tonight and Mt. Mary's and Upper Sandusky will play at 8:45. The remainder of the tournament will be run off according to the previously announced schedule.

Bankers Take League Lead

Johnny Leppo Hits 676 Total and 253 Game.

Richman Clothes bounced Tracy-Avery right out of first place in the Club bowling league last night with a 3-0 shutout at Colony alleys, and Mansfield Savings took advantage of the T-A setback to win a 2-1 decision over Doherty Fraternity and climb into the driver's seat.

Johnny Leppo had one of his hot nights, pacing the league with a 676 total on a straight 200 series of 209-214-253. Dan Nagle had a 625 total and P. Shafer 622 including a 245 game for second high. There were 21 games of 200 and better.

Trammel Stopped In Comeback Bout

CHICAGO —(AP)— Jack Trammel Youngstown, Ohio, heavyweight who was making his first appearance here since he was suspended after losing to Jimmy Adamick several years ago, was knocked out in the first round last night by Clarence Brown of Chicago in the main event at Marigold Gardens.

Brown, a 200-pounder, sent the 185½ pound Trammel sprawling in the third minute of the opening round and the Ohio boxer was counted out at 2:37.

Brown let loose a flurry of punches to stagger Trammel at the start and had him groggy after a couple of minutes. A terrific left and right to the chin knocked Trammel to the canvas and it was all over. Trammel showed the effects of being inactive for several months and was off in the timing of his punches.

NEW YORK —(AP)— John McDonald, who's going to Montreal anyway, is the first to say that the army threw Dutocher out on his ear . . . Which probably is the last word on the subject . . . The Washington Redskins already have a pile of 1943 season ticket applications, but there's been no sign of a rush for opening day ducats at the Senator's baseball office.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

Stanley Woodward, New York Herald-Tribune: "No fighter ever has had a more enthusiastic reception in New York than Johnny Greco. He deserves it because he is a good clean puncher who eschews holding and mauling. Also because he beat a man who wears a zoot suit."

Whiz Kids Write New Big Ten Record Book

Phillip Gets 40 Points as Illini Swamp Hapless Chicago 92 to 25

By TOMMY DEVINE

CHICAGO—(UP)—It will take the crisp pages of a new Big Ten record book to attest to the brilliance of the University of Illinois' undefeated basketball team.

The irrepressible Illini rewrote the tattered pages of the old book last night, polishing off their conference schedule with a smashing 92 to 25 victory over hapless Chicago. The victory enabled Illinois to:

1. Become the first Big Ten team since 1914 to win two straight undisputed conference championships. Wisconsin was the last to accomplish the difficult task.

2. Become the first conference team since 1915 to sweep through a 12-game league season undefeated. Minnesota in 1919 and Purdue in 1930 finished with perfect records over a 10-game schedule.

3. Set a new all-time scoring record for a single game. The old mark had been set only Saturday night by Illinois as it trounced Northwestern 86 to 44.

4. Set a new all-time scoring mark for a season with 755 points. The former record was 721 points, established a year ago by Iowa in 15 games.

5. Set a new record for field goals in a season with 325. The former record was 288 by Indiana in 1942.

Those glowing team records were augmented by five individual marks which Andy Phillip, the sharpshooting Illini forward, established. Phillip assured himself a place among the all-time greats by:

1. Scoring 40 points against the hapless Maroons for the highest single game total in history. The old mark was 34 points by Bill Hapac of Illinois in 1940 against Minnesota.

2. Sinking 16 field goals for the best single game total. The former record was 13, held jointly by six players.

3. Boosting his scoring total for the conference season to 255 points. The old record was 242 points, set a year ago by Johnny Kotz of Wisconsin in 15 games.

4. Pushing his field goal aggregate for the campaign to 11. The previous high was Kotz's 95 in 1942.

5. Topping the all-time Illinois scoring record for conference play, with a two-year total of 414. The old record was 396 points by Chuck Carney, who compiled the aggregate over a stretch of three seasons, 1920-21-22.

Whether the dazzling Illinois combination will seek additional honors by acceptance of the national collegiate tournament bid which is certain to be tendered, depends largely on military service calls issued with the next two weeks. Four of the five regulars are members of army or marine reserve corps and are subject to call for active duty at any time.

Coach Doug Mills is receptive to a NCAA bid "if we can be at full strength and the boys want to play."

In other games last night Purdue upset Indiana 41 to 38, Minnesota topped Wisconsin 48 to 34, Michigan battered Northwestern 53 to 41 and Ohio State downed Iowa 53 to 46.

Godoy Aims For Heavy Title Bout

SANTIAGO, Chile —(U.P.)— Arturo Godoy, twice unsuccessful in an attempt to win the world heavyfeight championship from Joe Louis, today planned another invasion of the United States in hopes of winning a possible "duration" title.

Godoy, who regained the South American title this week with a 12-round decision over Alberto Lovell, announced last night that he would leave for the United States by plane Saturday.

The Chilean champion fought Louis twice in 1940, losing a 15-round decision and being knocked out in eight rounds in his second attempt.

ORDER HITS USE OF FERTILIZER

Those With Nitrogen Content Will Be Hard To Get This Year.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Current federal regulations on the use of fertilizers place few limitations on the use of superphosphate or of mixed goods which contain no nitrogen, but extension agronomist Earl Jones of Ohio State university says that farmers should note the restrictions placed upon the use of nitrogen alone and on fertilizers containing nitrogen.

Orders for fertilizer containing chemical nitrogen will be filled entirely on a priority basis this year, with each farmer required to declare to his dealer previous use of fertilizer on the farm where the material is to be applied. Crops henceforth will be classified into groups A and B, and it will be mandatory for dealers to fill fertilizer orders for use on A crops before selling fertilizer for application on B crops.

Dealers will not, however, have to wait for A orders to come in from farmers. The new regulations require only that they apportion their stock on hand to fill the orders on file on any day.

Fertilizers containing chemical nitrogen cannot be applied on any crop at rates per acre exceeding those recommended by the experiment station of the state. The Ohio experiment station does not recommend the use of any chemical nitrogen on soybeans.

Salt Lake Plans Plant To Produce Smokeless Fuel

SALT LAKE CITY —(INS)— A smokeless fuel plant will be constructed in Salt Lake City if the War Production board will give Kindred L. Storrs' idea the green light.

The idea to rid the city of its winter smoke cover and also aid war industries is ready to go, Storrs said.

George W. Carter, a mechanical engineering instructor at the University of Utah, asserted Storrs' "process is practical," and the state administration has put up $35,000 to build the plant.

"The plant will turn out 50 to 100 tons of smokeless fuel daily," A. S. Brown, Utah commissioner of industrial development, said, "and at the same time, by-products including tar resin, both needed by war industry, will be produced in sizeable quantities."

Storrs explained the plant idea as follows:

"Operating on a simple principle of liquifying coal under pressure and applying varying heats to the liquid mass, we can draw off the various by-products and leave a pure and smokeless fuel."

The smoke cover laid over the city by nearby copper smelters has been a big problem to residents.

DOG PROVES COSTLY

SACRAMENTO, Cal. —(U.P.)— W. Del Richards, deputy state real estate commissioner at Oakland, has found the upkeep on even a small dog sometimes is hard on the pocketbook. A superior court judgment awarded J. M. Doyle a bicyclist, $1,250 after evidence was presented that Richards' dog was responsible for an accident which resulted in a broken leg for Doyle.

CHICAGO LOOP NOW BUSIEST NIGHT SPOT

War Brings New Prosperity To Downtown Section of Second City.

By BILL ROSS

(UP Correspondent)

CHICAGO—The lights may be out in Europe. There may be dim-outs along the east and west coasts. But Chicago's loop is blazing as it never has since the day of Mrs. O'Leary's famous cow.

Army dim-out regulations have dulled the luster of New York's gay white way. The neon and flashing lights of Times Square have been darkened for the duration. Piccadilly Circus—where Londoners once congregated in peace time splendor—is completetly blacked out. But Chicago—well, the Windy City is today's gayest bright spot in this whole war-torn world.

Each night an estimated throng of 100,000 men and women stroll up and down famed State street, cross-cross blazing Randolph, and window shop the length of the colorful thoroughfares of the entire Loop district. And each night this pleasure-bent army spends an estimated $1,000,000 on fun and food and liquor and taxes and the other present-day forms of draining the surplus from their flush pocketbooks.

Loop theaters are jammed from noon opening to past midnight closing—jammed to the uppermost balconies. Legitimate playhouses—and there are seven running—nightly hang out "standing-room only" signs. Night spots report banner crowds and unprecedented spending. Downtown stores remain open nights to accommodate customers. Eating time in the Loop is never over and tables and counter space are at a premium.

One cafeteria daily serves 10,000 meals and most of the time there are people waiting in line to be seated. Sometimes the line extends for a quarter of a block or more on either side of the eatery's entrance doors.

Thousands of people are streaming into the city everyday. To get a hotel room requires more than a government priority in most cases. The army is using two of the city's largest hotels—the Stevens and the Congress—for the duration. Chicago, where in ordinary times 3,000,000 visitors could easily be taken care of, now has great difficulty in finding space for today's guests.

Day and night you will see a line of men and women waiting to register at any downtown hotel's desk. And unless reservations are made two or three weeks in advance, they're usually out of luck.

Bellhops make $80 a week without trouble or overwork. Never before has there been such a record of bank deposits at Chicago's banks. And Chicago's record of war bond sales and war production ranks among the nation's highest.

Men in uniform seem to predominate the crowds. The famous Navy Pier is "home" to thousands of sailors. The nearby Great Lakes Naval Training station is the largest of its kind in the world. Nearby army camps and schools contribute thousands of men to the overflow throng of those seen along the nation's new "main stem." One service center—where everything is free, including the food—is host to 100,000 men in uniform every week.

You've heard of conditions in wartime Washington where congressmen have been compelled to sleep in their offices. Well, in Chicago they probably couldn't find offices.

The Loop a city within a city, has known much history and many people. It has known Abraham Lincoln who made his headquarters here during his presidential campaign. It has known Alphonse Capone and Ben Hecht.

It has known squalor and splendor but never before has it known anything like wartime, 1942.

3,300 PUPILS ARE SENT HOME

Janitors Fail to Build Fires at East Liverpool.

EAST LIVERPOOL —(AP)— Pupils in 17 public elementary schools here were sent home today after janitors failed to report for work, leaving the buildings unheated. Superintendent H. G. Means announced.

Dismissal of classes gave 3,300 children an unexpected holiday.

Perle C. Sheets, president of the AFL Building and Service Employes union, said the janitors a week ago asked the board of education to grant them contracts for 12 months instead of the nine-month school term, but school officials had taken no action on the request.

Finish Off Japs On Guadalcanal With Cannon

Jap resistance on Guadalcanal is being finished off by big guns. Rather than risk the lives of U. S. soldiers, heavy cannon fire is being brought to bear on the enemy troops still holding out in isolated positions. A 155 mm. cannon has just hurled a large shell at a distant Nipponese outpost.

pieces, chocolate coating of such items, chocolate shot and similar processes.

The War Production Board is responsible for an order that may make beer weaker. It ordered a 7 per cent cut by large brewers in malt and malt syrup consumption and prohibited small brewers from exceeding 1942 consumption. The order will not appreciably reduce the quantity or quality of beer produced, but WPB officials admitted that some brewers might reduce the alcoholic content as a result of it.

The egg order provides that retailers shall compute their own ceilings by a percentage mark-up, depending upon the volume of business applied to the net cost of the eggs they buy. On the average the top price for large grade A eggs will be 52 cents a dozen; extra-large grade A, 54 cents; grade B, 50 cents, and grade C, 47 cents.

Seasonal changes will be cared for by computing the price each Thursday. After June 1, prices are expected to climb upward to a late November peak of perhaps 10 cents a dozen above the March average.

Retailers will be divided into four groups according to their volume of business. Big independents and chain stores will be required to sell eggs at a lower price than their smaller competitors.

Your Federal Income Tax

No. 50: ITEMS NOT DEDUCTIBLE

Personal, living, or family expenses and capital expenditures are not deductible items in the computation of the statutory net income, whereas all the ordinary and necessary expenses of carrying on any trade or business are deductible.

In the event a taxpayer is engaged in an occupation which requires the use of equipment, as in the cases of army officers, ball players, firemen, aviators, nurses, and surgeons, the cost of such is deductible only to the extent (1) that it is specifically required and (2) that it does not take the place of ordinary clothing. Thus, expenditures for the purchase and cleaning of jockey's uniforms and baseball uniforms of professional baseball players and the cost of raincoats, boots, and helmets of city firemen and policemen are allowable deductions, while the cost of uniforms of army and navy officers, nurses, railway trainmen, barbers, and surgeons is a personal expense and not deductible.

Among other nondeductible items of expense paid or incurred by taxpayers during the taxable year there may be mentioned premiums on life insurance policies, insurance paid on a dwelling owned and occupied by a taxpayer, amounts expended in seeking a position or in traveling to the place of a new position, commuters' fares, the cost of post-graduate courses, bar examination fees, expenditures for the maintenance and operation of an automobile used for personal convenience and not by reason of necessity in connection with a business, penalty payments with respect to federal taxes—whether on account of negligence, delinquency, or fraud — amounts paid by a parent to unemancipated minor children for services rendered by such minor children, and amounts deducted and withheld from the wages or salary of employes as federal old-age-benefit tax.

At 20 miles per hour the average motorists cannot stop his car in less than 191 feet upon an icy pavement.

29 Men Escape, 29 Returned to Ohio Prison Farm

LONDON, O. — (INS) — The year of 1942 saw an unusual record established at the London prison farm in the matter of escapes and walkaways. During the year 29 men escaped and 29 were returned. Actual figures show that 30 escapes were made, but one man went AWOL twice, returning voluntarily from his first walkaway. He was placed in an honor camp because of his voluntary return, but broke away a second time, being caught and returned by an officer.

Figures on file at the prison show that 17 of the men who left without permission in 1942 were returned to the prison, one was found dead. Twelve who escaped prior to 1942 were caught and returned.

Five escapes from gangs working under guard were recorded for the year. Of these three were caught shortly after and the other two captured in another state and returned to Columbus to face prosecution for a new crime. This makes the actual escapees at large for the year a total of zero.

TO LIVE WITH LOVE +++

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER V

Clive looked at Carol, a penetrating, intimate look before he said, "You may always expect me to say not what the others have said. Has anyone ever told you that you're an exciting person, that fair women who seem cool and unapproachable are exciting because they are usually not as cool and unapproachable as they seem?

"When I put my hand over yours a few minutes ago, your hand was cool. I've felt it grow warm. I told you last night that having lived with love, you couldn't live without it."

"You mean—you think I'll be promiscuous?"

He smiled. "I mean that I'll be coming down to Clinton if you won't come to New York to see me. I won't try to keep you now. And when I come, I don't want to meet your friends or have dinner at your house or apartment or wherever you live or see any of the monuments of your fair city. When I come to Clinton . . . I'll want you. In the meantime I have friends and relatives here I haven't seen for three years. In the meantime, too, here is our dinner."

For the remainder of the time they were together he was an amusing companion whose alert blue eyes missed not a single pretty woman who came into the restaurant. A startling person indeed, Carol thought, who could be both gentle and violent, both understanding and ruthless, a man to stir both the pulse and the mind. And the heart? What woman would be naive enough to let her heart listen?

She asked, frowning a little, "Where will you go when you leave me?"

Her curiosity amused him. "To an apartment uptown where my father, now retired, lives between his books and his cats and his sister, my aunt. I am not what you would call a devoted son exactly. And if you must get that train."

She took a deep breath that hurt. "Yes, I must."

In the station there was little time. When the red cap took her baggage, Clive removed his hat and reached for her hand.

The surprising gentleness was in his voice again when he said, "Perhaps I should tell you why I understand how you feel now. I was a devoted son to my mother and what is happening to you happened to her some years before she died. I was old enough to understand and to see that women always hold it against women."

"Good-bye, Clive. And thank you . . ."

"I'll miss you, Carol." When she looked startled again that he should miss a stranger, he laughed. "Why shouldn't I? I insist that I shall miss you."

She followed the red cap, smiling a little, her eyes warm for a little while. But only for a little while. As the train moved, her face had the gaunt, hungry, controlled look again. She was going back. She was going home.

Home? To an apartment she had never seen, one which Freda had found and rented for her. Freda had said, "You know there's nothing I like more to do than fix up a place. I'll have your things moved from the house and the apartment ready to live in when you get back. What won't go into the apartment I'll put in storage."

Freda had written that the house, the charming stone house which she and Bill had planned together, had been sold while Carol was in Reno. But Freda had not said whether Bill and Evelyn were back in town or where they would live. Bill and Evelyn . . . Bill . . . now another woman knew him as she knew him.

Freda waited in the Clinton station. A small, slender young woman in a full length skunk coat and a small, smart black hat, she was an attractive, vivid and obviously impatient figure in the gloomy old station. Her dark hair was swept up from the sides of her face like two sleek wings ornamented by pearl button earrings. Her eyes were beautiful, dark, large, heavily lashed. Wife of the successful easy-going Ian, mother of a 7-year-old son, mistress of a handsome country house, Freda was a contented, happy and envied woman.

She had not always been so. Daughter of an obscure, improvident couple, Freda had gone to New York to learn interior decorating. Three harsh, self-sacrificing years she had been there when, coming home for a vacation, she had met Ian, the town's most sought-after bachelor, for the first time.

After an interlude of two years during which Ian had pursued and begged, she had married him and returned to Clinton, knowing that the girls he hadn't married would hold it against her for the rest of her life, knowing that she had to sell herself to Ian's conservative family, knowing, too, that it would require far more intelligence and skill to adjust her volatile, nervous, candid nature to Ian's passive, slyly humorous one than to learn how to become a successful interior decorator. And though there were still women in Clinton who considered her an upstart and an outsider and though some of Ian's relatives only invited her to their homes at Christmas, she was still adored by Ian and was a person of prominence in the community, feared by those who didn't know her and loved by those who did.

She loved Carol Sturtevant as she would a younger sister. Meeting Carol when Carol and Bill had first joined the country club, conscious from her own experiences that Carol had to sell herself to the country club set or else be a handicap to the aggressive Bill, she had gone out of her way to make Carol welcome and to praise her when and where others could hear her praise. She had tactfully guided Carol along the difficult small-city social path, coming to know and admire the younger woman's innate fineness, her broad intelligence and sensitivity and her glowing, unselfish love for her husband.

Since Ian and Bill were friends, the divorce had jolted both Ian and Freda. Though Ian had characteristically wagged his distinguished greying head and said only, "That's how it goes," Freda had felt all of her protective instincts rising to fighting force. A loathing deeper and keener than any she had felt before went out to Bill and had not since abated.

In the station Freda glanced at her diminutive diamond-studded watch. In ten minutes Carol would be here. Poor kid . . . coming home . . .but to what? To what? Freda lighted a cigaret and nervously flicked the ashes. Carol was coming home to friends—divided. Of course, they sympathized with her. "Poor Carol . . . what a dirty deal. But you know men, darling. Who is Bill's new wife? I'm dying to meet her."

Curious cats! Freda could have told them a little about Evelyn. Yesterday driving by the Beaumont hotel she had seen them get out of his car . . . Back from their honeymoon . . . Freda's eyes flashed. Honeymoon! She knew something better to call it. Why was Carol coming back to Clinton? But she remembered that Carol had said, "I'm not going to be driven away as if I'd done something. Clinton is the only home I've ever known. Freda. My friends are here. You're here." She thought now, "You bet I'm here and I'm going to stick."

The train was coming in. Freda hurried to the gate, seeing Carol's lovely eyes looking up.

"Darling," Freda cried, embracing her, "you look perfectly swell! Come on, let's get out of this frigid station. My feet are cakes of ice." She hurried Carol out so that she would not be reminded of the many times she had met Bill here.

In Freda's sleek black coupe Freda said, "You're coming out to my place for a couple of days."

"I'd rather not, thanks," Carol said. "If the apartment is ready, I'd like to get settled. I've been living out of a traveling bag and trunk for too long. I'm—I'm all right."

"You'd say that no matter how you felt. And when I said you were looking perfectly swell, I meant it. You do. One of the things about a person born with good bone structure is that no matter how you feel, you look fine. Your bones don't let you down. I hope you like the apartment and all the liberties I've taken with it. I found you a maid, too. Bessie. She'll be in in the morning. I found a place for Rosie, too, out in the country where she likes it."

HEAVIEST RAID ROCKS BERLIN, SETS BIG FIRES

500-Plane Attack Officially Called Prelude to Allied Invasion.

Zebra" and who has made more than fifty raids, said:

"We found over 30 fires raging when we stooged in over the target.

"We droped a cookie right in the heart of one of the fires."

The "cookie" sounded new, so Sanderson was asked what it meant. "A four thousand pounder," he said simply.

Another RAF pilot who has been all over the map with four-engined bombers and their loads of destruction said:

"Milan and Lorient couldn't be compared with it.

"The whole target area was a sea of crimson flame."

Pilot John Southwell, a 28-year-old Londoner, said: "The raid extended over a large area. It was very successful."

All pilots said there was a very high percentage of "dead accurate" bombing, and all had comments of praise for the perfect synchronization achieved by navigators and bombardiers.

The official air ministry communique said that the half-hour highly concentrated attack gave Berlin "its worst and heaviest raid of the war."

The force of the attack with heavyweight bombs could be judged to some extent by the announcement that 119 planes were lost, indicating a probable force of between 400 and 500 took part.

(Editor's Note: The German radio broadcast an announcement that 89 persons were killed and 215 injured in what was described as a "terror attack." "Considerable damage" was caused, the broadcast admitted.)

The fires set by the first British airmen to arrive over Berlin could be seen for 20 minutes before crews at the end of the attacking squadrons reached the target area.

On the return journey, the pilots reported, flames rising from the battered Nazi capital could be seen from points as far distant as Bremen and Hanover.

Hanover is over 150 miles from Berlin while Bremen is nearly 200 miles distant.

Clouds of smoke covered large areas of the capital, they said.

The entire British bombing force was composed of four-engined machines which carried both 8,000-pound and 4,000-pound bombs among their great load of high explosives.

Skies over the target area were free of clouds and visibility was virtually perfect.

Returning crews said that they were able to see plainly all of Berlin's landmarks, including the river Spree, lakes and famous large buildings.

The raid was Berlin's 58th and it was the sixth successive night on which the reich was rocked by the blast of British aerial bombs.

One pilot who spent 15 minutes inside the ring of Berlin's aerial defenses stated that although there were a number of searchlights in action and there was plenty of anti-aircraft fire the defenses were "not up to Berlin's usual standard."

"Once through the outer ring of defenses the flak wasn't by any means intense," he said.

The Nazis themselves described the raid as a "concentric attack," which probably meant that the British fliers swarmed in over the city from all directions simultaneously to unload their lethal bombs in a short space of time.

This latest assault on Berlin probably was on a scale comparable to the heaviest of the recent devastating assaults on the Rhineland industrial city of Cologne and exceeded only by the historic 1,000-bomber exploit against that city last May 30.

The largest ships in the British arsenal — Lancasters, Halifaxes and Stirlings—went in over Berlin to make the heavy and concentrated attack, the air ministry said.

Other objectives in western Germany also were hard-hit, and mines were planted in Axis-controlled waters.

The Nazi-operated Hilversum radio in the occupdied Netherlands asserted five British craft were brought down in the assaults on western Germany and occupied territory.

British fighter planes carried out patrols over Nazi-dominated France while the principal bombing assault were under way.

Undersecretary of State for Air, Captain Harold H. Balfour, declared meanwhile that the Allied non-stop bombing offensive which has been in progress since last Wednesday night "is preparing the way for an Allied invasion of Europe."

"Taking a long view of the war these raids are the opening bars which will rise to a crescendo of a march on Europe," he said.

Knox Questions U-Boat Base Attacks

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Navy Secretary Knox questioned today whether aerial bombings of German submarine bases along the northern coast of France were doing direct damage to the U-boats holed up there between forays into the Atlantic.

Knox, estimating the enemy had 300 to 400 submarines presently available, told a press conference he was unable to say how effective the bombing attacks were "in direct hits" and emphasized that "some of the stalls (in which the submarines are kept) are heavily protected."

The secretary was asked in starting the discussion whether the bombings had been effective and he replied: "Well, if you put it that way, I'll say they are effective. They certainly are doing some damage—if nothing more than disrupting the life of the community."

Asked whether there was any evidence of an increase in the U-boat force now on active operations against Allied shipping in the Atlantic, Secretary Knox replied there was no such evidence and said the Atlantic situation "has been pretty stable lately."

Hastily, however, he added, "that doesn't mean they can't increase—I think they have 300 to 400 subs available."

This estimate was considerably more conservative than estimates of many naval men who have placed the German submarine strength at probably 400 to 500—possibly even more.

Threaten Raids On U. S. Cities

(By United Press)

The Berlin radio said today that New York, Boston and Washington "may not be safe" from German air attack in a few months.

The implied threat was contained in a broadcast, recorded by CBS, complaining that raids on Europe "are particularly cowardly on the part of America, in view of the fact that its shores are still a safe distance from air bombs."

"However," the broadcaster said, "we should not forget that in consequence of the progress of aviation, even New York with its much vaunted skyscrapers, Boston and Washington may not be safe a few months hence."

Duce Promises More Aid to Nazis

(By United Press)

LONDON — Benito Mussolini was reported today to have promised Adolf Hitler, through Hitler's foreign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, that he would send several more divisions of Italians to Russia, and order general civil mobilization in Italy to provide labor for Axis war plants.

A dispatch reaching Zurich from Berlin said German government circles were "frankly and honestly" satisfied with the results of Ribbentrop's conferences with Mussolini in Rome.

Both Hitler and Mussolini were "inflexibly and fantically determined to continue the war," an Italian newspaper was quoted in a dispatch to Zurich.

Timoshenko Leads New Smash In North

MOSCOW —(AP)— Returning to the foreiront of the Red army's operations against the Germans, Marshal Semeon Timoshenko has driven into their positions on a broad, wind-swept sector of the northwestern front in a sudden thrust smashing the seasoned German 16th army, the Russians said today.

Today's noon communique did not mention the fighting in this sector but dispatches indicated Timoshenko has not halted his drive after sweeping over 900 square miles of territory and recapturing 302 villages.

A special communique last night reported 8,000 Germans killed and 5,000 captured.

It was the first official mention of Timoshenko in months and the campaign was his first important effort at northern fighting in this war. His role in the new offensive was interpreted an indication the marshal still had Premier Stalin's full confidence.

The strength of Germany's 16th army has not been stated but Izvestia, the government newspaper, reported that "numerous German divisions were defeated east of Lake Ilmen."

The current fighting is reported to be west of the Valdia hills, which means that the Germans do not have this defense barrier from which to operate.

At Lychokovo the Russians cut the railway between Staraya Russia and the railway junction of Bologoe.

BLAMES MEAT

Food Expert Says Germs Found In Food That Made Workers Ill.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Dr. Joseph Drayer, city food expert, reported today that contaminated meat caused the illness of several hundred employes of the F. and R. Lazarus and company department store who were stricken after eating an evening meal in the store Feb. 22.

Dr. Drayer declared straphylococcus germs were found in samples of veal, the main course of the meal.

vancing weather front."

If the weather clears the resulting battle might rival or surpass the epic three-day battle Jan. 8-10.

A smashing defeat was inflicted on the convoy, bearing reinforcements for Japanese positions at Lae, with the result only a remnant of the original force of four warships and five transports survived. The Japanese lost at least 75 and possibly 100 planes trying to protect their ships.

Allied reconnaisance planes first sighted the new Japanese force Monday and were able to follow its course along the New Britain coast.

The convoy's appearance followed closely General MacArthur's warning Monday the Japanese were concentrating large quantities of men, shipping and planes in the islands north of Australia, either for an offensive smash at the island continent or in anticipation of a new blow for Allied forces.

Meanwhile, Allied bombardiers took a crack at numerous Japanese airfields and shipping, from Waingapoe, on the Island of Soemba west of Timor, to Alexishafen in New Guinea. They strafed trails in the Mubo area south of Salamaua, and ground patrols surprised and destroyed a collection of Japanese barges at the mouth of the Waria river just south of Salamaua.

Australian War Minister Arthur S. Drakeford said he believed the Japanese preparations in the Southwest Pacific were essentially for defensive purposes but said they would be in readiness for attack if the opportunity came.

In Burma, the United States air force announced it had put out of commission the strategic Gokteik viaduct, between Mandalay, and Lashio, the terminus of the Burma road. Loss of the viaduct, a 2,200-foot long engineering marvel which bridges a river gorge, cut Japanese rail communications with their forward forces which have been attempting to renew a drive into China's southwestern province of Yunnan.

The Americans all returned to their base, despite a running air battle, while other American planes bombed railroad targets at Thazi, 5 miles south of Mandalay, and at Paukkan.

Williams Predicts Rationing In Effect By April 1.

AKRON—(AP)— Regional Director Birkett L. Williams of the Office of Price Administration predicts that nationwide meat rationing will be placed in effect by April 1.

He told a meeting of civic officials, union leaders and meat dealers here yesterday that meat rationing and the placing of a price ceiling on livestock would ease this city's acute meat shortage.

PAY DEDUCTION TAX FAVORED

'Half-and-Half' Levy Would Forgive Income Tax From Mid-1942.

before the paycheck deductions begin.

Opposition to the "half-and-half" idea has been voiced by the treasury department, which dislikes the prospect of canceling any portion of 1943 levies because of the record income levels expected.

The withholding levy would impose 17 per cent rates on net income and increase normal exemptions by 10 per cent.

No deductions, such as the present ones for earned income credit, local taxes, and charitable contributions, would be allowed. This cut would be cancelled by the exemption increases and reduction of rates from 19 per cent (normal and first surtax bracket) to 17 per cent, according to treasury estimates.

The weekly exemptions allowed under withholding would run $26 for married persons, $12 for single persons and $8 for each dependent.

A net levy of three per cent paycheck deductions would be added to the 17 per cent income withholding rate to cover the present five per cent victory tax. This would not result in a reduction since exemption credits amounting to two per cent of the present tax are not allowed under the withholding device.

The subcommittee today takes up the question of how to extend the withholding recommendations to farmers, professional men and others who do not receive their income in checks and salaries.

3 Senators Try To Draft Woman, Child Labor Bill

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Three state senators undertook today to mould into shape satisfactory legislation to make available more womanpower and young people for war production and other industries handicapped by labor shortages.

The three senators were appointed to a sub-committee of the senate commerce and labor committee as it completed its fourth hearing on the Ross bill to relax the labor laws applying to females and minors.

Senator Theodore M. Gray, (R., Miami), one of the trio said there was no indication when the revised bill would be ready for passage. His associates are Senators Fred G. Reiners (R., Hamilton) and E. E. Addison, (R., Franklin).

Last night's session produced the first compromise between the employers and labor, both of whom have fought furiously over the bill. The employers favor the bill, which provides for a broad relaxation of laws restricting working hours of women to 48 a week and prohibiting their employment in numerous occupations. Labor insists a commission should be established to suspend application of the laws to specific plants.

HOPES DASHED

Observers Say Reds Won't Grant Poland Old Borders.

LONDON—(U.P.)—Diplomatic observers believed today that Poland's hopes of regaining her prewar frontiers are definitely ended, although Polish Premier Wladislaw Sikorski may attempt to contact Josef Stalin in an effort to reach some understanding.

A Russian declaration, distributed by the Tass agency, accused the Poles of imperialism. Most observers here believed Russia is determined to retain the frontier that existed in 1940 at the time of the Nazi blitz on Russia.

ALLIES CRACK NAZI DRIVES IN TUNISIA

Hurl Back Von Arnim's Troops In North, Capture Sbeitla on Central Sector.

said the three towns were occupied without fighting.

Only the fall of Sbeitla was announced in today's Allied headquarters communique. Sbeitla is 18 miles northeast of Kasserine while Feriana is about 20 miles southwest of Kasserine.

Both American and British planes struck heavy blows at Axis air and ground strength.

Flying Fortresses which are cutting deeper almost every day toward the heart of the Italian war effort struck at Palermo, in Sicily, and fliers reported hitting five large merchant vessels and several smaller ones in the harbor. They also damaged warehouses and drydocks.

There were two waves of Fortresses, and gunners shot down seven Axis fighters without suffering any loss themselves while Lightning escorts shot down another fighter.

One of the heaviest tolls of enemy fighters of the campaign was taken when Marauders with Lightning escorts skimmed within 60 feet of the ground to attack a much-bombed railroad bridge at La Hencha, near Sfax, and other targets.

They blew up the bridge in a 30-minute battle with German fighters, the American bombers shot down four Messerschmitt 109's and Focke-Wulf 190's while their Lightning escort knocked another five planes out of the air.

Other planes were shot down in other sectors.

The fall of Sbeitla occurred yesterday, today's Allied headquarters communique said.

In the far south the war bulletin said fighters attacked objectives in the Mareth area but there was no announcement of land action.

In chronicling the fall of Sbeitla, the war bulletin said:

"Sbeitla is in our hands. Allied forces continuing their successful advance in the area 20 miles northeast of Kasserine occupied Sbeitla March 1 and penetrated three miles east of the town."

As the enemy attacks in the north lost their momentum, Allied headquarters said, "details of enemy casualties during the past three days show that he has paid a heavy price in men and material and has been held in all sectors. A considerable number of enemy tanks has been destroyed."

Hurri-bombers and Spitfires continued attacks on enemy vehicles in the northern sector of the Tunisian battleline yesterday while medium bombers raided Mateur, south of Bizerte.

Italians Report Losses In Raids

(By Associated Press)

The Italian high command, in a communique broadcast by the Rome radio and recorded by the Associated Press, announced today the deaths of 26 persons and injury of 530 in the latest Allied air raids on Naples, Palermo (Sicily) and other parts of Italy.

"Raids were carried out against Naples, Palermo and various other localities in the south of Italy," it said.

"Ten killed and 118 injured are reported among the civilian population of Naples. There were ten killed and 96 injured in Palermo, five killed and ten injured in Catanzaro Marina and one killed and 11 injured in Amantea."

The war bulletin said three planes were shot down over Naples by Axis fighters and two more by anti-aircraft guns, while two planes crashed in the neighborhood of Palermo. It said six Axis planes failed to return to their base.

Axis Tanker Sunk Off Coast of Spain

LONDON — (INS) — An Axis tanker has been sunk in the Atlantic through cooperative efforts of a United States Liberator bomber and a British cruiser, a joint U. S. A. A. F. and admiralty communique revealed today.

The tanker, fully laden, was sighted Friday by the American Liberator 500 miles west southwest of Cape Finisterre, on the northeast coast of Spain.

The Liberator made contact with H. M. S. Sussex, a 9,850-ton cruiser, and continued to shadow the enemy vessel for several hours until the Sussex hove in sight to intercept the tanker. The Sussex opened fire and sank the enemy craft.

NAZIS WREAKED SADISTIC HATE UPON KHARKOV

Germans Brought Hangings, Mass Murder, Spoilation and Semi-Starvation.

By M. S. HANDLER
(UP Staff Correspondent)

KHARKOV—(Delayed) —(UP) — Sixteen months ago Kharkov, Russia's fourth largest city, had 1,000,000 inhabitants, great factories, 35 colleges, 137 secondary schools and 20 research institutes.

The Germans came bringing mass murders, hangings, spoilation and semi-starvation.

Now, liberated by the great Soviet winter offensive, Kharkov has 300,000 residents, who are starving. Its colleges have been looted and dynamited and 60 per cent of its buildings are ruins.

I visited Kharkov with other Anglo American correspondents to see how the first city of its size to be freed by the red army had fared under German occupation.

We were told that 110 000 Kharkov citizens were deported to Germany to slave in factories and on farms Thousands were executed.

The survivors seemed like persons emerging from a nightmare. The palor of their faces reflected 16 months' of near starvation and the fear of the Nazi gestapo, whose firing squads and hangmen took a fearful toll.

We stood for a time in the shadow of "hangman's balcony," part of a modern building The gestapo would summon the population, beneath its balconies, proclaim the "crimes" of Russians marked for execution, and pitch them over the balcony, their falls to be broken by ropes attached to the rails and their necks

The first hangings occurred only two days after the Germans marched into Kharkov Oct. 28, 1941. Men and women with ropes about their necks were thrown from every balcony along the two miles from Dzerzinsky square to the railroad station. The bodies hung for days.

One of the most frightful spectacles in Kharkov's streets were Russian soldiers freed from German prison camps We saw one group that had been captured only last August Their heads were little more than skin stretched tightly over a skull. Their arms and legs were like sticks. Many walked on crutches. They said they were the sole survivors of 1,000 For months they received no food at all from the Germans, existing on the occasional contributions of the starved population of Kharkov.

The inhabitants of Kharkov itself lived for 16 months without running water, electricity or heat.

All secondary schools were closed in line with the Nazi intention to reduce the populations of occupied countries to illiteracy, he said.

German motorized infantry made a last destructive tour of the city before fleeing Feb. 15. They sprayed streets with tommy guns and automatic pistols, killing citizens who had no chance to run for cover, and hurled hand grenades through the windows of basements, where families had sought refuge.

Then, to complete the destruction 28 German bombers dive-bombed the center of Kharkov Feb. 17—the day after the Russians occupied the city and smashed the buildings which had not been burned.

PUTS SOLDIER UP FOR NIGHT

CINCINNATI - (INS)—One recent cold and stormy night a soldier arrived in Cincinnati for an all night stop-over. He tried one hotel after another but all were filled

In desperation he turned to the "hard boiled" slum section of the west end when Detective Fred Ruck saw him The plainclothesman drove the soldier to the USO headquarters in the Fenwick club but Lady Luck refused to smile—the house was filled.

Detective Ruck then took the stranger to his own home for the night.

John Schaaf, business agent for a taxicab drivers union, reported the incident because the modest detective was reluctant to talk about it.

More than 30,000,000 tons of raw materials and foodstuffs are imported by Britain annually.

YOU'RE looking at a sight rarely seen by anyone outside railroad circles.

It's the interior of a locomotive rebuilding shop where skilled mechanics put war muscles on 250-ton giants.

These war muscles—boosters, superheaters, and other devices for increasing speed and pulling power—make it possible for America's railroads to move America's war materials and essential civilian goods swiftly to where they are needed.

Yet, boosting motive power is only one of the many ways rail transportation is made fit and kept fit to help Uncle Sam.

Long before Pearl Harbor this "fitness" campaign was in full sway. Thousands of miles of main line track was replaced with heavier, more durable rails; automatic control devices were installed; new designs to increase the usefulness of cars were adopted; and many other measures were taken, and are being taken, to haul more goods in shorter time and at less cost.

As a result, engines, cars, rails, bridges, and terminal facilities have held up under the ceaseless pounding of double loads and emergency schedules through two years of preparedness and one year of war—with few replacements and a minimum use of strategic materials.

The greatest transportation job in history is being done. And it will continue to be done next year and the next and the next, in war or peace. For rail transportation is essential to the health, security, and general well-being of the nation.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, MARCH 2, 1943.

Odd as it may seem, there is one Mansfielder who admits that, up to noon today, he hasn't seen "the first robin."

The point system, as worked out in Washington, indicates no scarcity of apple sauce—which confirms a quite general impression.

"Have a place for everything, and keep everything in its place," becomes even more important as ration books and coupons become essential in making purchases.

Individualism Is Symbol of Victory

BY AN ironic twist of circumstances, modern war proves that individual initiative is the key to victory and progress.

Captain Eddie Rickenbacker says: "Once you put a boy in a foxhole, he is on his own. Once you drop a parachute trooper behind the enemy's lines, he is on his own. The youth in the cockpit of a fighter, in a tank, on a commando raid, is always on his own. The 'rugged individualist,' as a political symbol, may have few friends, but God help us if we can't recreate him on the battlefield and the factory floor." The nation that does not have rugged individualism on its side will lose the war.

This stark truth must come as a shock to political sharpshooters who have been busy kicking the props from under a system that was founded on the supremacy of the individual. Captain Rickenbacker is a product of that system. He fought as a soldier, willing to give his life that the system might live. He helped to pioneer the automobile and aviation industries. He has time and again taken chances, as a soldier and as a businessman, because he could envisage a bright future, not only for himself, but for his family and all the other families of America.

The future he has pictured through the years has not taken its lustre merely from the prospect of comfort and security. Eddie Rickenbacker is a typical rugged individualist. For him there is no future unless his right to take risks, to think up new ideas, to do things on his own hook and reap a fair reward, is safeguarded and encouraged.

Another Sticker for Windshield

A BRIGHT red sticker will add a further ornate touch to the already burdened "lower right corner" of automobile windshields as this year's paper substitute for metal plates comes into vogue. The 1942 license plates are to be left on the car, however, and the new stickers merely serve as proof that the license fee has been paid for the year starting April 1.

Some trouble may be encountered by motorists who assume that the glue is on the "wrong" side of the sticker, but it is explained by the registrar's office that the glue is "inherent" in the paper and that, when dipped in water, the adhesive property carries through the printed surface and makes firm attachment to the inside of the windshield.

No allowance is made for restricted use of cars under gasoline rationing and the state license fees remain the same. License stickers are now on sale at the office of the Richland County Automobile club, Elks' building, and the suggestion, as heretofore, is "get 'em early and avoid the rush."

Time To Cut Needless Spending

THE WESTERLY, R. I., SUN suggests several ways in which the town council could be saving money at this time. It calls for a real job of reducing appropriations, with the local tax rate reduced at the same time.

As war costs mount, people begin to take more thought as to cutting public costs. One writer suggests that half the government agencies could be abolished. The catch in that is—which half? It's quite likely, however, that every government agency or bureau could do with at least one less employe, fewer pencils and typewriter ribbons, and much less paper. If the head of every such office were to face the paper cut which newspapers face, and were to give a little serious thought to what is important to keep and what can well be spared, paper and typewriter use could be much reduced.

Nor are public agencies the only offenders. Private offices and homes still have much to learn. Maybe a penny saved is only a cent after all. Americans no longer think in penny terms - but ten pennies buy a war stamp.

Westerly will have to begin somewhere if it is to pare down its civic expenses. Other cities, counties and states, villages and townships, might well be thinking and acting along similar lines.

Patrons Becoming Less Critical

THE WAR is doing one good thing—it is putting minor grievances in their proper place. Thus the hotel guest with a steady array of complaints about trivialities is a thing of the past, according to Harold Van Orman, president of the American Hotel association.

A short delay in answering a ring, or valet service that is not of perfect quality, is a pretty small inconvenience beside the hardships of Tunisia or Guadalcanal. The average hotel guest recognizes this and is lenient.

Some of this new sense of proportion might well carry over after the war.

More Religious Liberality Noted Among Hindu, Moslem Classes

(Editor's Note: Tomorrow, DeWitt Mackenzie, war analyst of the News-Journal, just returned from India, will discuss the Moslem claim to the establishment of completely independent Moslem states in India. The article will introduce one of the most colorful figures in Indian political life, Mohammed Ali Jinnah, the famous lawyer of the Moslen league.)

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

IF YOU stood an Indian moslem and a Hindu side by side you would see little difference in their appearance, and if you followed each of them through his day's routine you would find their pursuits much the same, barring religious observances.

Yet tradition has it these two are born to eternal enmity because they worship different gods. Tradition say this means there can be no political unity in India and no solution of the present crisis on a national basis.

Well, that tradition has a lot to substantiate it, including bloodshed, and the student of the situation who overlooked this would be shortsighted. We must admit at once that one of the greatest political problems of history is bound up in India's religious animosities and in such interlocking social customs as the Hindu caste system which divides humanity into thousands of more or less iron-clad classes.

Still, I challenge tradition. Its weakness is that it fails to take into account the fact that conditions change through the generations. What seemed true three hundred years ago, or thirty years back, may be untrue today. And to my mind the question of whether Moslems and Hindus can get along together is far from being the same now as it was a generation ago when I first visited India.

Orthodoxy in the Moslem and Hindu religions has become much more tolerant. India's sons of today are displaying a liberality which their fathers didn't possess.

THE CONSENSUS among Indians of all classes as I found it was that, despite the undoubted differences, there is no reason why these two religions should not get along together. Sir Tej Bahandur Sapru, the great liberal leader, put it to me like this:

"I am a Brahmin (the highest and most aristocratic Hindu caste) Last night twenty-five persons including poets dined in my house here, and eleven of them were Moslems.

"In many instances Moslems and Hindus have a common ancestry. We eat the same things, dress the same and live the same, excepting in the south where the languages are different.

"There have been differences between Moslems and Hindus but they are not two nations. I stand for a common citizenship."

The other day I visited a little Hindu village in northern India. In the midst of 113 Hindu families I discovered two families of Moslems, living in peace with their traditional enemies. These Moslems were carpenters, and the men were building wheels for ox-carts in the common court-yard of their little mud-huts.

A Brahmin priest, who according to orthodoxy is defiled if even the shadow of an automobile falls across him, was sitting on a log and chatting with them. I don't suppose for a moment he would have broken bread with the Moslems, but when I entered the scene they were laughing over some joke he had made, and I strongly suspected he had been telling them the story of the traveling salesman.

I found many proofs in my travels about India that Hindus and Moslems could like and work together, but the most impressive was in the Hindu state of Gwalior.

GWALIOR is one of the most powerful of the states ruled by the princes. When I was in India 27 years ago I was the guest of the late Maharajah Scindia in his palace for ten days—an Arabian nights adventure.

His highness was a delightful host and left nothing undone to make my visit pleasant, even offering to stage a tiger hunt on elephants. He was a broadminded man—a fact which made even more striking the one characteristic which seemed odd and contradictory: He wouldn't eat foods with one who wasn't a follower of the Hindu religion.

Now that great and good prince has gone to his fathers, and his young son rules in his stead. However, it was but natural that I should want to see Gwalior again on this trip, and I was repaid with one of the great thrills of my journey.

I found that in this Hindu state all religions are living and working together in amity, and this striking development had been fostered by the late Maharajah who at one time didn't feel it was right to eat with an unbeliever.

The state officially celebrates the main festival of both Moslems and Hindus. At Christmas time there is a salute of 21 guns as a mark of respect for the Christian religion.

There have been no communal riots for years.

TODAY IN HISTORY

The United States Department of Education was established by an act of congress on March 2, 1867

Dave Boone Says:

THE THING to bear in mind about March is that it is Red Cross month. Everybody knows the grand work the Red Cross workers are doing for the suffering, starving and dying all over this stricken world. It even takes more money to be merciful than it used to. So every man and woman should give till it hurts.

* * *

It seems to me that Mr. Wickard should pay attention to that warning of more than 3,000 food merchants that the big menace to our food supply is the "groceries bootlegger." He's operating just as the liquor bootlegger operated in prohibition days.

These food men say that OPA fixes prices for retailers and the prime receiver, but don't even admit the existence of the small jobber who is the vital factor. They charge that the OPA boys operate on theory instead of common sense.

* * *

All the public knows is that it pays higher and higher prices for what it wants, and if it won't pay these prices, the food goes to those who deal with the bootleggers. It's a pretty sorry picture.

Red Cross Serves As the Connecting Link

Editor's Note—Today's opening of the Red Cross War Fund campaign adds timely interest to the following editorial from The Stars and Stripes, published in London, in which one phase of Red Cross work is appreciatively explained.

"NOTHING disrupts an army as quickly as no news or bad news from home," said Brig. Gen. L. B. Hershey recently, and he hit the nail smack on the head. In this theater many men are working seven days a week to see that home news, good news, and "true" news, reaches you to knock old man worry clean out of the vocabulary of GI's in the U. S. army.

Part of this job is being done by Special Service . . . this publication assisting. The Red Cross does the rest and their work is vitally important to you

It has been found that the worries of most GI's are of a nonmilitary nature. No soldier seems to worry over being out of step at the last parade; but he does worry if he feels things are going badly at home.

To eliminate these fears Red Cross field directors have been assigned to act as the link between the men and their families. These directors have a splendid organization behind them to assist in case of emergency. By cable they can get in touch with your people in any community in America, and the Red Cross chapter there takes over on the home front.

When a GI consults a Red Cross field director he's getting the impartial and free advice and help of a lawyer, doctor, chaplain, business man, philosopher and friend all rolled into one. Not because Red Cross directors are supermen; but because behind every one of them stands an organization with the knowledge, power and financial strength needed to solve your problem.

Among the services offered are the following: Relief for soldier's families in distress . . . assistance in locating families of soldiers or welfare advice for such families . . . help in securing employment for members of a soldier's family . . . fast communication between a soldier and his family . . . loans to soldiers as circumstances warrant . . . and assistance with business problems resulting from military service.

These are but a few of the varied services which the Red Cross is glad to render. Thousands of cases are handled every month, and if you have a problem or a special worry of your own, see the Red Cross and let them help you solve it.

By DREW PEARSON

Army Was Eager to Pick Cotton, Looked for Excuse to Move In WASHINGTON — There was a lot more than meets the eye behind the army's move to pick cotton in Arizona, followed by the sudden rescinding of the order by Manpower Commissioner Paul McNutt. It looked very much as if the army were trying to play politics.

Last summer, hard-hitting Senator McNary of Oregon deluged Secretary of War Stimson with letters urging that men be furloughed to harvest crops in the Northwest. But Stimson flatly refused. This time, however, the army—though Stimson didn't know about it—was just itching to pick cotton.

Here are the inside facts:

When the question of the Arizona cotton crop arose, Deputy Farm Security Administrator John O. Walker submitted a report that only 7,500 bales of long staple cotton were left unpicked as of Feb. 1; that only the tag end of the crop remained, widely scattered; that 1,700 cotton pickers already had been moved in from Missouri and Texas; and that enough of them remained to handle the harvest.

Also about 13,000 bales of short staple cotton were unharvested, but with two years' supply on hand for the nation, the government wasn't worried about such a small amount.

Note: Last year when Rommel menaced Egypt there was considerable worry about long staple cotton, most of which comes from Egypt. But since then Egyptian cotton has been moving regularly to the U. S. A.

Army Loves Cotton Fields.

WALKER'S recommendation was so negative that no one in the agriculture department thought anything more about the question of using the army. President Roosevelt had said that he would order out the army only if the secretary of agriculture certified that an emergency existed, and Walker reported there was no emergency.

Then an unusual thing happened. Brig. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, on Gen. Marshall's General Staff, telephoned Farm Security's John Walker and suggested that he revise his report. He wanted to give the army an excuse for picking cotton.

This was done. Walker rewrote his report, and on the basis of this second report, prompted by Gen. Edwards, the army was ordered to pick cotton. Later when Manpower Commissioner Paul McNutt heard about it, he raised such a fuss that the order was rescinded.

Secretary of War Stimson is understood not to have known anything about his general's cotton-picking plans. As to what prompted the army to want Walker's report revised in order to put soldiers in the cotton fields, two unofficial explanations are offered:

(1) The army wanted to show its goodwill with the farm bloc in order to quiet fears of too big an army and a labor shortage; (2) the army wanted to show that its cotton-picking would be a failure, thus not be bothered with more demands for soldiers in the harvest fields this summer.

No explanation was forthcoming from the army.

Note: Labor suspected also that the army was going to help out Arizona cotton planters who had declined a 30-cents an hour minimum wage to imported farm labor. Some big Arizona planters turned this down after Oscar Johnston, of the Delta growers, telephoned from Mississippi urging that Arizona and Delta growers stick together. Johnston, once on the Federal payroll, manages British-owned plantations in Mississippi, is the biggest cotton grower in the world.

Mrs. McLean's Dinners.

RATIONING will change a lot of things around the nation's capital, among them the time-honored pastime of going out to dinner. Dining out is one reason theaters never have thrived in Washington. A dinner party is more amusing. A potpourri of politicians, diplomats, senators could stage just as good show as vaudeville any evening.

Most famous and sometimes most bizarre of the Washington dinner parties, year in and year out, have been those of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, owner of the Hope Diamond, whose play-boy husband, a close pal of Warren G. Harding, tried for a time to save Doheny by saying that he had loaned the mysterious $100,000 to Albert Fall in the Teapot Dome scandal.

Mrs. McLean's estate "Friendship" was the scene of many a Harding party, after which Mrs. Harding sometimes accused her husband of smuggling whiskey bottles into the White House.

The McLean dinners, continuing through the years, have featured such guests as British Ambassador Lord Halifax and Finnish Minister Procope, whose countries are at war, yet who have sat at the right and left respectively of their hostess and kept up an animated conversation; also head G-man J. Edgar Hoover and FBI-hating Martin Dies; also the glowering John L. Lewis and many a big business potentate who fears him.

Mrs. McLean takes a lot of people under her wing, some of whom are now wondering how her dinners can continue under rationing.

Knox's WAVE.

FOR WEEKS there have been WAVES all over the navy department, but now one has been assigned, for the first time in history, to the office of the secretary.

In an ante-room of Knox's office, dressed in a snappy blue uniform, and looking alert, sits Mary Lou Stevenson, Yeoman 3rd class. She performs all the duties of the male yeoman who preceded her, who is about to be released for active duty.

On being questioned closely, pulchritudinous Yeoman Stevenson says, "My real name is Mary Louise, but they generally call me Mary Lou down home."

"Down home" is Mount Sterling, Ky.

What a Tank Battle Looks Like When You Are Right There Watching.

THE TUNISIAN FRONT—(By Wireless)—This and the next few columns will be an attempt to describe what a tank battle looks like.

Words will be poor instruments for it. Neither can isolated camera shots tell you the story. Probably only Hollywood with itts machinery of many dimensions is capable of transferring to your senses a clear impression of a tank battle.

The fight in question was the American counter attack on the second day of the battle at Sidi Bou Zid which eventually resulted in our withdrawal.

It was the biggest tank battle fought so far in this part of the world. On that morning I had a talk with the commanding general some 10 miles behind the front lines before starting for the battle scene.

He took me into his tent and showed me just what the battle plan was for the day. He picked out a point close to the expected battle area and said that would be a good place for me to watch from.

The only danger, he said, would be one of being encircled and cut off if the battle should go against us.

"But it won't," he said, "for we are going to kick hell out of them today and we've got the stuff to do it with."

Unfortunately, we didn't kick hell out of them. In fact the boot was on the other foot.

I spent the forenoon in the newly picked, badly shattered forward command post. All morning I tried to get on up where the tanks were but there was no transportation left around the post and their communications were cut off at noontime.

We sat on the ground and ate some British crackers with jam and drank some hot tea. The day was bright and mellow. Shortly after lunch a young lieutenant dug up a spare jeep and said he'd take me on up to the front.

WE DROVE a couple of miles east along a highway to a crossroads which was the very heart center of our troops' bivouacks. German airmen had been after this crossroads all morning. They had hit it again just a few minutes before we got there. In the road was a large crater and a few yards away a tank was off to one side, burning.

The roads at that point were high and we could see a long way. In every direction was a huge semi-irrigated desert valley. It looked very much like the valley at Phoenix, Ariz.—no trees but patches of wild growth, shoulder-high cactus of the prickly pear variety. In other parts of the valley were spotted cultivated fields and tiny square stucco houses of Arab farmers. The whole vast scene was treeless, with slightly rolling big mountains in the distance.

As far as you could see out across the rolling desert in all four sections of the "pie" formed by the intersecting roads was American equipment — tanks, half tracks, artillery, infantry—hundreds, yes, thousands of vehicles extending miles and miles and everything standing still. We were in time; the battle had not yet started.

We put our jeep in super low gear and drove out across the sands among the tanks. Ten miles or so east and southeast were the Germans but there was no activity anywhere, no smoke on the horizon, no planes in the sky.

It all had the appearance of an after-lunch siesta but no one was asleep.

AS WE drove past tank after tank we found each one's crew at its post inside—the driver at his control, the commander standing with his head sticking out of the open turret door, standing there silent and motionless, just looking ahead like the Indian on the calendars.

We stopped and inquired of several what they were doing. They said they didn't know what the plan was—they were merely ready in place and waiting for orders.

Somehow it seemed like the cars lined up at Indianapolis just before the race starts—their weeks of training over, everything mechanically perfect, just a few quiet minutes of immobility before the great struggle for which they had waited so long.

Suddenly out of this siesta-like doze the order came. We didn't hear it for it came to the tanks over their radios but we knew it quickly for all over the desert tanks began roaring and pouring out blue smoke from the cylinders. Then they started off, kicking up dust and clanking in that peculiar "tank sound" we have all come to know so well.

They poured around us, charging forward. They weren't close together—probably a couple of hundred yards apart. There weren't lines or any specific formation. They were just everywhere. They covered the desert to the right and left, ahead and behind as far as we could see, trailing their eager dust tails behind. It was almost as though some official starter had fired his blank pistol. The battle was on.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Tournament

ON Washington's Birthday, the annual county basketball tournament was held at Senior high school, in our town. An hour or two before the games began, out by the byroads and villages and country lanes began to appear hikers going to the tournament. I talked with two 15-year-old lads who were walking ten miles to the city.

"Why would you walk that far?" I said.

"Oh, it isn't far. We've often run five miles and weren't tired. And nobody can guess how this year's games will go . . . the teams are so evenly matched, it'll be partly luck. Herb and I are subs. I hauled manure all morning and he helped buzz wood. Our dads told us, if we worked real good, we could go—and here we are! We aim to beat the rest of the gang from down our way—they'll come in cars. Half the neighborhood'll be there to root for our team and see them win."

When I entered the gym, I believed the boy was right. The place was packed. Each village high school had its cheering section and its brightly uniformed cheer leaders. The husky, sinewy, muscular rural lads looked fine in gaudy new shorts and shirts. Each boy had pledged his all to win for his school and community. On the bleachers were his parents, friends, aunts, sweethearts and cousins, all boosting for him.

I sat among my neighbors, cheering as lustily as they—24 to 24 in the last quarter—then the local 'half pint' shot a long field goal. The home team had won—they would play again, another day, in the finals. Five hot, dishevcled boys ran to the center of the court and hugged each other.

* * *

CITY PEOPLE do not always realize that athletic prowess means more to a country lad—more of inconvenience and hardship in getting to practice after school, when the buses leave at four and a boy must walk home after a workout on the field. I saw a lad, down our way, brave a blizzard and walk five to six miles home—and I knew that then he would have his chores to do. Such a boy does not ask softness and easy victory—he thrives on rugged hardships, and grows from a vigorous boy into a strong, ambitious, confident man.

It is not by chance that the U. S. army and navy find their best soldiers among the country-reared men of the corn belt, the mountains and the wide open spaces.

A PLAN FOR your Victory garden is, in its way, as important as a battle plan for, as L. R. Simone, director of extension, New York State College of Agriculture says, "Every home vegetable garden, CAREFULLY PLANNED, and planted with skill on suitable land, will be a direct contribution to our country's war effort."

When a house is built, the corners and important dimension points must first be "staked out."

The same holds true for your vegetable garden. Its shape, size and corner points must be located and staked. The locations of the various rows for vegetables must also be measured off and marked.

It is best to plan your Victory garden on paper, before attempting to plant it out of doors. The size of your garden will be governed by the space you have for it, the size of your family, and the amount of ground you can work with good results.

The accompanying Garden-Graph shows a Victory vegetable garden plan for a family of four including amount of produce to be canned. It is printed as a guide for you, but there are countless variations of such a garden, both as to size and varieties of vegetables to be planted in it.

The garden planned in the illustration is really two gardens in one. This is accomplished by means of succession plantings, which mean that the first vegetables planted in a given space mature in time to permit a late planting of still another vegetable in the same space.

Every family has likes and dislikes, and these must be taken into consideration when planning your garden, if you would avoid waste.

OAKLAND, Cal. —(U.P.)— Judge T. W. Harris has accepted the contentions of attorneys for Mrs. Ebelia Ortiz that the tossing by an angry husband of a live baby on a hot griddle constitutes a legal ground for divorce. She was granted an interlocutory decree.

Coffee Shortage Helps Popularity Of Sassafras Tea

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. —(INS)— Coffee rationing is causing an increase in the Hoosier sassafras production according to Selden L. Stone, of Indianapolis, dealer in shredded sassafras tea.

Sassafras root digging is becoming a rejuvenated "industry," and is supplying employment to numerous residents of Brown and Morgan counties, he said.

In fact, a claim is on record in the Brown County Democrat that one person bought an abandoned farm and in a few days had dug enough sassafras roots from it to pay for the land.

The tree, which displays vivid fall colors and is one of Brown county's attractions, is undamaged by the sassafras producers. Only the small roots are taken from the tree.

Stone said that it is possible to obtain as much as 500 pounds of sassafras roots from one tree, although this amount is higher than average.

The dealer said that other states than Indiana might receive value from the growing demand for sassafras tea. The red, American variety of tree, considered the best type, grows also in Kentucky, Georgia, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Virginia and Ohio.

LOSE THEIR CAR WITH BABY IN IT

NORTH PLAINFIELD, N. J.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Corrado Corradio parked their automobile outside a restaurant here, their six-year-old daughter sleeping in the back seat.

When they returned, the car was gone. Police found the car parked a mile from the restaurant. The baby was still sleeping soundly.

Skunk Grease to Go Into Bombs to Drop on Hitler

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UP) - If only the "scent" could be retained Missouri hunters and trappers undoubtedly would go all out in collecting skunk grease for the bombs to be dropped on the Axis.

The conservation commission of Missouri states that the fat salvaged from the carcases of one opossum would yield enough glycerin to fire five 37 mm. anti-aircraft shells, while a skunk would be good for the glycerin needed to fire four anti-tank shells.

With or without scent, collection of raw fats from wild animals has been advocated by the salvage section of the War Production Board, and the commission estimates that the fat of furbearers and other game animals taken by Missouri hunters and trappers in an average year, if collected, would be good for enough glycerin to make 2,000,000 pounds of anti-aircraft ammunition. At 2½ cents a pound, the fat would yield $50,000, which, the commission suggested, could be contributed to the USO or Red Cross.

OHIO STATE TO HAVE ENOUGH STUDENTS LEFT

Dean Predicts War Won't Cut Enrollment Seriously Until Summer.

COLUMBUS -- (INS) -- Although numerous students at Ohio State university may be called to the military service soon, those who remain will still have plenty of company.

Junior Dean Charles Wells Reeder, military service representative on the campus, predicts a student body of about 7,500 for the spring quarter starting March 30.

Emphasizing that military withdrawals in the next three months will still leave Ohio State with a large student body, Dean Reeder answered the question "who will be left" in this way:

1. The women will be left. They started the year with 3,487 and the group is subject only to the usual causes for withdrawing. New programs of war courses and adjustments are being made for them.

2. The Naval Reserve, totaling 240 students, will remain in school.

3. The Army Air corps reserve, with 296 men, will remain.

4. Professional schools will continue will full enrollments totaling 808 - of which 291 are in medicine, 257 in dentistry, 260 in veterinary medicine.

5. Pre-professional students, numbering 800, will continue until June.

6. The engineering college will not be affected much for the spring quarter. Most of its 1300 students will remain.

7. Draft deferments by selective service boards will affect some students, the exact number of which cannot be determined.

Full effect of the calls to military service will not be seen on enrollment until the beginning of the next summer quarter, Dean Reeder said.
